I know the children today are confused and have no idea of what happened back then. I know the weirdos who have infiltrated the schools teach their own agenda which fails to even slightly resemble the truth. It is sad, so very, very sad ...

However, back then, a person had to save the tin cans which they just prepared their food from. They had to save their toothpaste tubes. There was such a shortage of things, you had stamps and certain days you could buy such things as coffee, tires for your car, etc. The shortages and conditions which the people living though the war had to tolerate would be shocking to the children today.

Life was centered about that war effort. People had weapons are were ready to defend their homes, families, friends, property, etc. when foreign forces got to our borders. Like someone has mentioned, someone needs to get ahold of some history books which tell what really happened and was going on ... I am old enough that my grandparents lived through these times, had memories, had pictures ... all the children seem to have today are false ideas of what it was all about, about what really happened ... sad, so very, very sad ... as those who don't remember are doomed to repeat it ... a real shame when my grandparents fought this terrible war so that the children coming along now wouldn't have to go through such things ...

Ignorance really does look disgusting ... especially when that ignorance causes those inflicted to appear like un-thankful idiot-morons ...

JS

Strange why some are so anxious to admit their life is chit and they have nothing else to live for. That this is good enough to occupy because they have nothing else and no one else wishes to bother with them, have them around or have an interest in what they say or thing ... it is a pitiful cry for help, I suppose. A statement on just how worthless a human life can become ... sad, so very, very sad ...

She looks like a damn retarded child which has grown into a retarded

The treasonous public servants, being paid by the rich elite, simply took our tax dollars and converted them into stolen oil, antiques, and the assets and holdings of Iraq. They then allowed the rich-elite-masters to deposit these sums in their own personal coffers, off shore and hidden. They are doing what they are paid to do.

We need to audit the fed and put good financial investigators on the trail and recover these assets and put them back in the public coffers. Unfortunately, everyday, this problem only gets worse. We need to correct this. We need to imprison some of our public servants and hang the rest who are guilty of criminal and treasonous actions. Unfortunately, some just want to elect another criminal, of the other party, to steal from us--I guess that will make them feel better and take care of their needs and wants.

We just need the right catalyst to get things going. I guess there are not enough homeless, hungry, sick and destitute Americans yet, when there is, we will be in a much better situation to see something happen to correct all this. Until then, all we can really do is wait and watch poverty wreck its' havoc on the population. Some, like you, will probably be able to get pretty hungry and do without for an amazing length of time ... so, we need not get in a hurry, probably.

JS

I don't know how they can "disprove" that. Since the main component of our bodies is carbon, since the main component of plants is carbon, every plant, every germ, etc.

Obviously, anyone capable of doing the math can figure out they are lying ... carbon dioxide is our friend. Without it, life would cease to exist on this planet in short order ... claiming there is too much carbon dioxide, in the context of nature and the earth, is very similar to claiming there is too much water, too much dirt, too many deserts, too many mountains.

The main source of all the carbon a plant is made of comes from carbon dioxide ... without plants we would have no oxygen to breathe.

Consumerism is materialism, the opposite of spirituality.

If I have to "live in a cave" to try to save the future for my grandkids
I will do it.

I've already given up meat and air-conditioning and watering the lawn.

That begins an interesting thought. How, we Americans, greatly extended our lifespans, health and well being from grazing humongous amounts of beef and having the American diet centered around this excellent source of protein.

Now that the rich find that the population is too expensive to feed a diet of beef to, they wish to convert us over to a diet of rice, veges and tofu. Some idiots will actually begin touting this as desirable! If you ever doubt the lack of intelligence in a good portion of the population, you just gave a good example of a reminder ...

You go eat that chit ... leaves more steak for me!

This has been dis-proven. The added vegetation offsets very little net carbon.

How about we quit eating meat? That's the fastest, most effective means

Tell it to the people who cut taxes and went to war. They ran up a trillion and a half dollars more debt from 2001-2009. They did it "off budget" meaning that when the real cost was merged with the general fund, we were suddenly an extra trillion in the hole.

If you think Obama's a big spender, what do you think of Bush?

Yes. Science.

Your "climategate" was a creation of big oil. The quotes were taken out of context, were not part of any official documents, and ultimately proved nothing, except that some people will wrap their lips around any sausage dangled in front of them.

The point is missed.

Yes, pound for pound, CO2 as a GHG is mild compared to methane, water vapor, nitrous oxide and a number of other GHGs. The problem is that there is so much more of it, especially after we have been releasing 300,000,000 years' worth in a geologic blink of an eye. A human being is a lot bigger than an army ant, but pit him against a million ants and see what happens.

The plant population of this planet is no match for the hundreds of millions of years' worth of dead plants we have quickly released back to the outer environment. The CO2 concentration has risen drastically in the last 250 years, and continues to go up exponentially - if plants were able to absorb it, this effect would have been obvious by now, and it's not. Moreover, the plant-based systems that could absorb it - rainforests, temperate forests and even the oceanic plankton - are currently so decimated by man's other activities that their capacity for sequestration are quite limited.

Nobody claims that elemental carbon or CO2 is a poison.

Good luck with that tree planting idea. You could not cover the planet with enough trees to stop the CO2 rise even temporarily.

Once again, RHF misses the point and uses a false point of comparison to state his case. If you're going to compare coconuts with sewing machines, you need to find the common factor.

BTW - once more, with gusto - COMMON SENSE DOES NOT = LOGIC OR SCIENCE.

Common sense is virtually worthless in physics, chemistry, astronomy, geology, meteorology, climatology or any other physical science. The number of mistakes that have been made in science using common sense is legion. I won't give a nickle for your common sense when it comes to any of these.

I was grinding a drill bit, a tiny piece of grit got in my right good enough to keep that Sh!t out of my eye.I asked the eye doctor guy, what is that gizmo? He said it is a Burr.He sprayed some kind of stuff

Don't let nobody tell y'all that Burrs aren't good for anything.

Wonderful discussion! :-)

No, I didn't do that. I agree, it might have fried the wire or magnetized the toroid. The problem was all between the outer shell and the ground lug-washer on the SO239 side of the device. That contact was not accessible as it was potted in resin. I had already removed the magnetics. The 15A flowed only through lug-washer and the outer conductor.

>>> Isn't there a little factors like cutting the Antenna Wire to the 'right-length' and having the 'correct length' of Coax Cable that contribute to a good
"Match" : At least for one SW Band ? ~ RHF <<<

The MLB is meant to give a good-enough, install-and-forget, receive-only match between a 50 ohm line and a random wire whose Z wildly gyrates between 30-1000 ohm in and out of the complex field. Any RF transformer turning 50 ohm into 300 to 600 ohm is vastly superior to a direct connection.

There are receivers that include exactly that kind of transformer between the inputs for "50 ohm" and "600 ohm" or "wire". I have seen such transformers working reasonably well all the way between .1 and 30MHz. The MLB is nothing special but works like that, on a 300/1 bandwidth. The Lowe 124-225-250 etc. contain such a transformer, and work OK down to 30 (thirty) kHz, a 1000/1 bandwidth. By "working" I just mean that a given signal from a wire antenna produces dramatically better results when fed via the transformer than direct to 50 ohm input. That improvement geverally jibes with the source being hi-Z.

I've never been able to reproduce such broadband behavior in a toroid I wound myself. The Palomar Associates MLB clone was OK but weaker on MF-LF. The ICE ununs come in lower and higher frequency range versions. I have no idea what the trick is in the transformers used by Lowe and RF-Systems, but it must be very simple, e.g. a mix that compromises by having a somewhat higher loss all over or by saturating at low power levels [over 5W :)], but that's just a guess. It has to be smtg that normal 1:9 ununs made with the usual HF mixes don't do terribly well.

As for transmission: go on a ship, and if it's old enough you might still even see a nice chunky metal case with the leftover transformer matching the MF or low-HF random wire to a coax, complete with anti-flashover insulator. Every time the radio room was removed from the wire antenna, it made economic sense to deliver the 100-1000W RF by standard radio guide (coax) than via a special high-voltage, high-impedance line made wire suspended inside a large copper pipe.

In the real (professional) world NOBODY in at least the last 30 years tried to cut MF or HF antennas to resonate on a special frequency. Broadcasting dipole arrays were ~ 2:1, MW (AM) towers (and even VHF-UHF antennas in space applications back in the day) are roughly sized for radiation angle requirements, not for natural resonance. A 5/8 lambda vertical is like that.

Professional broadband dipoles normally "guarantee" a SWR mismatch under 3:1 over 2-30MHz, and I remember UHF space applications with 1:10 SWR on short coax lines that were compensated at the radio end of short low power and low loss coax runs. In many applications antenna mismatch is practically irrelevant as long as it does not multiply losses in the transmission line.

It's a consideration that corresponds to the cos-phi concern in electric power transmission. A wild mismatch may generate extra current or voltage that will cause additional Joule loss in conductor and dielectric. In power transmission, 50-60Hz wavelength is so large that you don't really get localized voltage peaks and throughs due to reflected and direct power interference patterns, but at RF you see that too, so you get both added losses and extra insulation breakage risk. But if the run is short, and the power is low, both losses and overvoltages can be safely ignored, and reflection and Z mismatch can be addressed at the radio end.

In a long coax run, the huge mismatch of a nonresonant wire to a lo-Z coax is nontrivial, and a transformer can actually nicely cooperate with an ATU at the other end.

Today's AUTOMATIC ATUs are now routinely placed at the antenna end. Not needing human attention, it makes sense to move them over there, in which case a RF transformer becomes irrelevant. Antenna-side MF transformers on ships are a thing from the indoor manual ATU and early automatic ATU era.

But even today, antenna side transformers are the rule in the HF market. That's what you do to improve match between a generally-high impedance antenna and a low impedance coax of a broadband dipole. The few rhombics still in use either have a Z-transforming balun or an extremely low loss and broadly Z-matched balanced HV line. Ditto for beverages - you could just connect coax and wire, but it would be lossy, and nobody does it.

The broadband no-transformer no-ATU alternative exists. In practice, only the military can afford the metal masses of large HF antennas that have no clear resonance and reasonably narrow Z range without RF transformer [and w/o resistor... :-P], like inverted-cone on ground plane, double-cone dipole, discone. Also (few) hams use log-periodic rotatables. An MIT dorm used to have a fixed LP all-wire ham antenna, never heard of a ham using a fixed "half-LP" vertical wire curtain. Even with such antennas I'd still leave an automatic ATU in line if already available. And, not coincidentally, such antennas are generally sized for >13 MHz. Below that it's mostly broadband wire & transformer country.

>"Toss the piece of cr*p and get/wind something decent ... "

Yes, one can surely do that!

((narrower response or you tell me the simple trick for practicable 300:1 width) and/or (heavy, ground level or masthead commercial unit) and/or ((buying toroid, casing, connectors, strain-relief, sealant) and (winding, drilling case, installing strain relief, connectors, soldering, sealing)))

Because you have poisoned the environment for original thinking with your WLS and your Fox News.

True, but not necessarily a problem. The battlefield is kept out, on antenna and transmission line. On the radio side of the coax you do see a function of the remote mismatch both in terms of wrong impedance and in terms of a partly reflected wave delayed by the travel time back and forth and with I/V out of phase due to the reactance at the other end. What an ATU does is 1- compensating the reactive mismatch so that the power source sees a resistive load
2- rephasing the incoming reflected wave to match the outgoing 3- providing impedance transformation at the transmitter end.
The result is maximized power transfer, and a clean load from the p.o.v. of the transmitter, w/ minimized apparent reflection. I think 1 and 2 are mathematicaly dual to each other (please someone confirm!). Not so sure how 3 fits in but it prolly does.

The price you pay for this is a nice mess along the transmission line, with power being reflected back and forth in an infinite convergent series of quickly dropping factors until radiated by the antenna, or lost en route to heat and line radiation, while minimizing the stress on the transmitter.

Nodes with higher current and voltage along the way also increase Joule losses - but, again, this may be the dual of expressing the loss due to reflection, I am not sure if there is a nonlinearity at work here.

Having everything matched with the minimum use of concentrated L and C is beneficial (inside the radio, in the ATU, in the transmission line, and appended to the antenna), but if the transmisson line is very efficient and not overly stressed (foam or air insulated, decently sized conductors and insulator, not overheating nor breaking insulation) a matching network close to the radio side is bearable. Quite characteristically, as frequencies rise losses mount. Losses along the same line at a similar mismatch may be negligible at LF, acceptable at HF, excessive at V-UHF. This is why this is so often done in professional applications.

In general. an antenna side matching device is better than radio side, and no matching network is better than with, but perfection is not always indidpensable. For example, the advantages of radiating in a certain geometry (e.g. a Yagi, a nonresonant vertical...) or with greater radiation resistance, may more than compensate for additional losses due to a necessary concentrated-reactance matching device.

That's gonna happen anyway, unless the government defaults. At this point in time, with an accumulated $13T debt, there ain't a lot of choice. If you don't raise taxes, it only staves off the inevitable.

Nowhere did I say either of those things. Just putting up a red flag

1) It WILL happen as India and China's middle class grows.

Indeed, this is a pretty likely outcome.

The difference this time around, I suppose, is that the guys behind the standard -- iBiquity -- have a lot of money at stake (they receive royalties on every single transmitter and receiver sold, as well as a cut of advertising revenue from HD broadcasts), so they're pushing hard to keep the format alive -- even going so far as to subsidize the radio manufacturers who agree to include HD receives in their products.

Interestingly, while AM stereo is about 99.99% dead in the U.S., in other countries I've read it's only, oh, say, 90% dead. ...although apparently this is mainly in countries that are too poor to purchase DAB transmitters.

Generally speaking, I agree with a lot of your posts. However, I think on this one, you are missing a few points, so I will to try and politely address them.

I don't know about "benign"; above a certain percentage, carbon dioxide will kill you...but that wasn't my point.

The point IS that CO2 is a greenhouse gas, and as more and more CO2 is introduced to the atmosphere, more and more solar energy is captured, thus raising the earth's temperature.

Again, no one said CO2 is a poison per se (even though it -will- kill you above a certain concentration).

The problem with your plant theory is at least two fold:

1) More and more green areas are being "developed" (paved over).

2) The rain forests are disappearing at an alarming rate.

If your plant theory is such a miracle cure (and "cleaning up the problem very quickly"), why do the ice samples show CO2 is INCREASING at such a rapid rate? All those plants that were going to save us must be loafing. ;-)

You are correct...and there -are- other problems that -should- be of concern to you (Law of Unintended Consequences). Bottom line is we (the world population) cannot just keep pumping bazillions of tons of CO2 into the atmosphere, year after year, and not expect to have negative consequences.

I almost agree with you, but unfortunately, with your nuclear power solution, you overlook two critical issues:

1) Nuclear fuel is extremely energy intensive to produce. Takes a lot of time and power to run those centrifuges...and due to fear of nuclear proliferation, breeder reactors may not be on the horizon any time soon.

2) We have to live with and safely store the waste from the nuclear power plants for a while, like say, 50,000 years or so.

I believe that to a greater or lesser degree (sometimes subtle), racism is indeed a component of the criticism.

Yes, I realize that in some cases Obama has lied...and is no doubt the first politician to have ever done so. ;-)

No, not a "cheap shot IMHO. Again, because he is not Caucasian, many times racism does enter into the equation -- where in many cases a white president would get a free pass -- or at least not have to tolerate the racial shots.

Huh? Obviously not...because W is, well, white. Doesn't mean he can't or shouldn't be criticized, but O is getting "legitimate" criticism PLUS racial criticism ...or criticism at least tinged by racism.

Not necessarily "rooted" but many times tinged.

Huh? Why would they? To state the obvious, W is white.

Not on the radar if you overlook the subtle (and some far from subtle) posts here.

You've never seen race on this NG used against O, even the "n" word?
Please read the posts here more carefully.

Sorry, DP. I may have been unclear. If so, my apologies. OTOH, it may be a comprehension problem on your part.

Let me try and clarify:

1) The dog issue has nothing to do with racism -- per se. My point was that people will sling ANYTHING at Obama, no matter whether he is right or wrong or how trivial it is (like the dog) and that in my eyes, at least -some- of it is racially motivated (nothing to do with your 'cheap shot' theory). In other words, if we had a Caucasian president, they would not necessarily sling anything and everything at him including stupid stuff like where he got his dog.

2) I in no way meant to imply that ALL criticism of Obama is racial. That was a rather large leap on your part.

A lot of the criticism is not racial; some criticism is well deserved. However, some criticism, albeit sometimes very subtle, does appear to have a racial component. Furthermore, many comments on the NG are blatantly racial, up to and including the "n" word. I'm surprised you haven't noticed it (or are just ignoring it).

3) The topic was "broken promises/lying" and you seem to have "accidentally" snipped W's biggest lies from my original post...so for your edification, I've put it back in (seeing as the topic is "presidential lies"):

> The last presidential lies [from W] cost us TWO bogus wars, a > trillion dollars, thousands of US kids dead, more thousands horribly > mutilated and tens of thousands of dead innocent civilians.
> If I had a choice, I'll go with the "lie" about the dog. :-(

At least so far, none of O's broken promises have gotten us into the mess that W's lies have.

I've explained it as best I'm able. If you think there is no racism towards Obama on this NG, you are certainly entitled to that opinion. I've explained my position, so please feel free to have the last word.

What? Isn't it like 70-80% of the public which is NOT if favor of any amnesty at all. And, isn't it about that same number who wants them kicked back to mexico without a kiss goodbye?

So, telling them one more time does what? Asks them not to commit treason once more? Krist, you'd think they would know, don't you? Or, isn't that the problem, they know and just damn well choose to do as they please?

If it were a republi-crat in the office, as I write this, very little would be different. We would still be marching in the same direction. The plans of the NWO and the shadow government would proceed, at each turn of the screw ... it makes no sense to hate obama for what is happening. Come next election, nothing he is doing will be undone, and will continue on in the directions he set their course for--you would simply be handed a bunch of excuses why it was happening ... haven't you been awake though the last half-dozen presidents, or so ... NAFTA was set in when clinton was in, bush furthered it, now obama continues it ... duh!

Well, yeah, you have to stop destroying the plants, at sometime, if you want them to start harvesting the cO2. However, there is a problem which has not gained widespread attention yet. Algae blooms, due to the lack of enough foliage on land to absorb the nutrients, and the nutrients are hitting waterways, are becoming common and threatening to some aquatic life. This will be the "next problem" someone wants to be paid to fix ... it never ends ... but, anyway, the algae will be after that cO2, if nothing else is.

Luckily, there is Thorium nuclear. A SUPERB alternative to ordinary U or Pu fission, very plentiful fuel (about 1,000 years' worth), much shorter-lived waste (a couple hundred vs a couple hundred thou), technology already there, India & France among others will have these online in a couple of years, a great stopgap until we can move onward to efficient solar and/or Fusion.

All we have to do overcome the immense influence of the fossil fuel industry and we Americans, too, could advance into the 21st century...

When this is most often because they are White

Strange how that works : Obama's 2008 Election Team

Called Play the "Race-Card" on him.

* * * IT'S A FACT THAT :
Prez Obama Won't Be America's First Black Prez-A-Duntz
http://diversityinc.com/content/1757/article/1461/
* First Prez Obama is Mixed Race : Half Kenyan African and Half American White ~50/50~
* At least Five (5) U.S. Prez-A-Duntz had African {Black} Ancestors in their Family-Lines : Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Warren Harding and Calvin Coolidge.
http://diversityinc.com/content/1757/article/1461/
- I also have met more negro racists
- than caucasian ones.

OK what is it that you do that causes them to come at you like a 'racist' ? {just kidding}

Also may be because : A White 'Racist' Person Would Not Come At You With A Negative Racial Attitude -cause- They 'Perceive' You To Be White
-wrt- They Would Treat You With A Positive Racial Attitude As Part of Their Race.

You Choice and Use of the Word : "Negro"
-wrt- African-Americans {Blacks} may be an valuable Indicator of the What and Why of your Reception by African-Americans {Blacks}
* Negro was common, polite and acceptable in the 1950s and before; versus using "The-N-Word".
* Black {Power} was common, polite and acceptable in the 1960s~1970s
* African-American {A Combined Racial and Ethnic Identity} has become more common, polite and acceptable from the 1980s to present.

=IF= You are Using 'Negro' in your speech when interacting with Post-Civil Rights Era {1960s) African-Americans : They may 'perceive' you to have a 1950s Pre-Civil Rights Era Attitude towards them : And "That" Sets the 'Tone' of the Conversation and Interaction for everything that follows . . .

Have you tried addressing African-Americans by their First Names and Smiling and Adjusting the 'Tone' of your Voice when Dealing with African-Americans ?
-or- Addressing African-Americans by their Professional Title and Last Name when the situation requires*.
-examples- Doctor Smith & Pastor Jones & Judge Coe
-or- a simple Mister Stevens -or- Misses Grains
* Treat African-Americans with Respect, Honesty and Fairness when you are Dealing-with and Interacting-with them as Individuals and as groups. Do-Unto-Others...

African-Americans have a Life-Time of Dealing-with and Interacting-with White People in a White Society.
* They can play the 'Yes Master' Role {Acting Nice}
* They can play the "What You Want Whitey" Role {Acting Aggressive}
* Or and "Shade" of Roles in-between to Communicate and Interact to Deal with Whites and Achieve Their Goals.
- However, I live on the west coast, and by far,
- I have met more racist negros here, than on
- the east coast--for the life of me,
- I don't understand why ...

Maybe the West Coast African-Americans feel FREER to confront your 'Perceived' Racism toward them then East Coast* African-Americans ?

* Maybe East Coast African-Americans are still more 'Repressed' by Daily Racism In Their Lives and are Hesitant about Speaking Out when confronted by the burden of the 'Racism' ?

YES - African-Americans* can-be and are 'Racists' as a Result of Living in a "Racist' American founded on a History of Their Enslavement in the USA for Centuries.
{Living the Legacy of the Victimization of Racism.}

* African-Americans have to deal with the present-day
Disadvantages of Their Legacy of Racism in the USA.
* Lower Education for many not all
* Lower Income for many not all
* Lower Social Status for many not all
* The History of Being Enslaved
* A Reality of Being Imprisoned much more that Whites
* The History of NOT Being Considered Fully Human
* The Ongoing Reality of the Vestiges of Racism still present in American Society
- = Results = -
All of these CAUSE African-Americans to 'Think' along Racial Lines with Themselves on-one-side and White-Americans on-the-other-side
All of these CAUSE African-Americans to 'Perceive' the Adverse Actions of Whites toward them as "Racist"
All of these CAUSE African-Americans to 'React' to Adverse Actions of Whites toward them as "Racist"
- The logic in suspecting those guilty who proclaim - their innocence the loudest seems to apply in the - case of suspecting those calling others of being
- racist, to be racists themselves ... and having a
- high rate of success ...

Sometimes we project on 'others' what we secretly believe are our own worst characteristics. A person trying to overcome their own 'Racism' might easily ascribe those inner feelings to the motivation and actions of 'others'.

A Lot of White Liberals 'Feel' The Guilt of the History of Racism in America. They Have Personalized This Guilt and 'Feel' Duty-Bound To Confront All 'Others' Who They See As Still Manifesting Racial Attitudes.
You Might Say That They Jump At The Chance To Call Another White Person A "Racist"
* That's Racist !

* Do You Know How Racist That Sounds ?
* You're A Racist ! -or- You Racist Pig / MF !
* Are You A Racist ?
* You Must Hate African-Americans / Blacks
* You Don't Like {Hate} Him/Her Just "Because"
They Are African-American / Black !
YES - These White Liberals have a Deck of Cards and Each and Everyone is "The Race-Card" and It Trumps Anything You Have To Say Back-At-Them.
To Their White Liberal Guilt Ridden Thinking : Play
"The Race-Card" -and- It Is Game Over : They Win [.]
They Put You On The Defensive and Redirect the Dialog At You and Away for the Issues you may have legitimately raised -wrt- African-Americans / Blacks.

There is the 'Other' Half of White Liberals 'Feelings' of Guilt about the History of Racism in America :
Their Inability To Deal With African-American {Black} Racism {Anti-White Attitude} Directed At Whites {Whitey}.
* They a Afraid that Speaking Out Will Get Them Called A "Racist" Themselves.
{ The Double Whammy of Guilt & Fear }
* Their Cop-Out is to DEFINE : African-Americans {Blacks} as Can NOT Be Racists Because The Lack the Power {Authority} To Act On Their Thinking, Attitude and Speech
{ I Ain't Hearing It No No No ! : Can't Be [.] }
* This Goes to the Extreme of CAN'T BE'ism {Turning A Blind-Eye} when an African-American {Black} Shouting Racial Slurs Kills a White* Person with Eye Witnesses; and the White Liberals will emphatically State that It Is Not A "Hate Crime" [.]
That is Base on "Race Hatred" by the African-American {Black} Murder.
{Again By-Definition African-Americans {Blacks}
Can NOT Commit Hate Crimes in the White Liberals Rule Book.}
* Also Asians, Latinos and Mexicans#
Many African-Americans {Blacks} 'Feel' that
They as a Group are Being "Displace" in American Society by Mexicans {Latinos} and have a real sense of Ethic and Racial Animosity toward Mexicans as a Group.
- This is purely only gleaned from my personal - experiences, and discussions with family and
- friends who have experienced the same ...
- however, I strongly suspect that others must

YES - Many African-Americans {Blacks} Reflect Back The Racism That They 'Feel' in their Daily Lives and the Sum of Their Life's Experiences

Because the Alps were crossed only twice by the military! Hannibal and After you mentioned this, what, a few months ago, I did some extensive research into Thorium nuclear power.

What I found was quite illuminating. And could, if implemented, alter the paradigm for nuclear power generation.

Power plants could be practically and efficiently scalable, to grow with increasing demand instead of reaching exhaustion and then being replaced. They could be smaller, less intrusive, to meet with the aesthetic expectations of a modern environment. And the reaction is self regulating. The expensive, complex system for monitoring and throttling the reaction would be less massive, emergency systems could be less cumbersome, and the containment and environmental clear areas could be far smaller. With waste recyclable, and much of it reusable.

Meaning, that every community could, conceivably, have nuclear power generation, and it could be transparent to the citizens, at far less cost per kilowatt-hour.

Bridging to a trough system of solar collection, and, as they do in Israel, storing the heat in molten flouride salts underground for nighttime production, could put some enormous solar power generation on stream in only a few years' time. If fusion doesn't reach that bridge first.

Bridging the gap between coal/gas generation today, with Thorium nuclear, until there is practical solar or fusion production, could, conceivably, put an end to rolling brown/blackouts, a sharp reduction in energy costs at the consumer level, with a transparent, and naturally evolving grid, and little, if any downside to the production.

If it weren't for the politics, this could be exciting.

Either you get billed directly (in your case) or we pay for it by taxes (in my case). Either way, NOT free.

Sad but true. Things you describe are just as bad all over the country...and it started with that wonderful thing called "globalization". Once we started shipping out our jobs to people willing to work for 50 cents an hour, that was the beginning of the end of American life as we knew it (and it ain't over, the worst is yet to come).

Ross Perot warned us about that giant sucking sound but sadly, most didn't believe him.

You want public polling by Fox News to determine how governent proceeds?
Where is THAT in the Constitution?

The good news is...Thorium sounds like good news.

The bad news may be...it isn't here yet, and typical of any brand new, unproven technology, it probably will have "growing pains".

Since Dave's dismissal of my suggestion/confirmation, I started several draft replies, but each time got bogged down in detail. However, I think that Spamhog's posting sums up the situation pretty well.

What must be realised is that you are not using the tuner/matcher (at the radio end of the coaxial feeder) to match into the 50 ohm Zo of the coax, and then, as an afterthought, connecting a totally mismatched antenna on the far end. What actually happens is that the antenna feed impedance is transformed by the electrical length and the Zo of the feeder (and also its loss), and the tuner/matcher (at the radio end) is adjusted so that it matches whatever impedance is 'seen' looking into the feeder. It matches the whole antenna system, ie the antenna plus feeder.

Admittedly, this arrangement only works well if the feeder losses are low. Unless the antenna is (fortunately) a good match to the feeder, the SWR on the feeder will be high, and the losses could be much higher than if the there was a good match at the antenna end. It follows that, to minimize the loss, you need to use the lowest loss type of feeder you can lay your hands on. Nice, chunky CATV trunk cable is a good choice, if your friendly neighbourhood cable company can be persuaded donate some to you - especially as fibre optics are rapidly replacing coax.

Note that this is certainly not the 'best' way of doing things. For receiving, it may - or may not - work better than using a 9:1 transformer at the antenna end. Both arrangements are a compromise. However, you can certainly transmit with this system and, from what I understand, at considerably higher powers than you can transmit through a 9:1 transformer. Low-loss TV coax is probably OK for 100 to 200W, although, for really high powers, you may need to think about the implications of high SWR, voltage breakdown, and current burn-out. Of course, an auto-tuner at the antenna end would be the best, but they don't work on receive-only.

Had there been a military application at the time, Thorium nuclear would have eclipsed the introduction of Ra-Pu nuclear. It's been around that long. The only reason Thorium nuclear didn't take off at the time, is that Thorium can't be used to make bombs.

And it's hardly unproven technology. The Navy has been using it for decades.

Decent quality RG-6 coax is easy to find at any of the home improvement type shops, satellite TV dealers, etc. It's a lot better than the RG-59 or RG-59/U that was sold in the past.

Compression connectors are reliable, easy to use and can be bought for as low as $12 (plus postage) a set including instalation tools. Really good ones and really good tools sell for around $50 for a set of 50 connectors and a tool, which are cheap enough and make a great group purchase.

You can also get BNC and RCA connectors of similar design, if you need adaptors to your radio, and the are easier to get than "F" adaptors. For those with Belling-Lee, aka PAL or just antenna connectors from outside the US, you can get them at Radio Shack, Universal Radio, or a pack of 30 for around $15 including postage from Hong Kong or the UK.

The biggest confusion is what an antenna tuner does. The ones sold for ham radio are often assumed to resonate the antenna because a transistorized radio transmitter needs a resonant antenna.

They do that, but ONLY from the point of view of the transmitter. At the transmitter end of the coax, the antenna, when properly tuned, APPEARS resonant, so the transmitter does not "blow up".

In reality, it is no more resonant than it was before the tuner was used.

Too many people believe that it actually changes the antenna to be resonant.

Cor Beijersbergen posted a link in the Yahoo Shortwave-SWL-Antenna list to a usenet posting from long ago by John Doty. Here is the link and my reply:

http://www.iw5edi.com/ham-radio/?swl-longwires,47

It's an interesting article.

There are two points I'd like to make.

The first is that the article is 14 years old.
That's important to note because he says:

"No man made or atmospheric noise is included. If they are significant, the precision of the match becomes less critical. "

Where I am both kinds of noise are significant. To the point that I get S9 or greater noise on those frequencies which are not dependent upon propigation, and S9 or greater noise on propigation dependent signals when "the band is open". In 1996 the noise was insignificant.

"The better (smaller) the noise figure, the less you have to worry about matching. Sky Buddy owners will want to tune their antennas very carefully."

When he wrote this, my Kenwood R-5000 was a new, high performance receiver. There were only a few receivers in its class, e.g. the NRD-525D, the ICOM R-70/R-71, and the Drake R8.

My R-5000 has just celebrated its 20th birthday, so I expect that low noise figure receivers are common now.

I do know that my Sony ICF-2010 (actually older than the Kenwood) needs a preamp/preselector (Ameco PT-3 in my case) to equal the Kenwood, my recently aquired Drake SPR-4 (even older) is as good as or better.

So I really don't think a matching transformer will do much for me.

Geoff.

Absolutely not, hasn't been done in decades. By the time you get to the ballot box, the game has been fixed--the deck has been stacked, there is not one puppet moron on that ballot which will make the slightest bit of difference to your life, your families lives, your friends lives ... those name are simply a list which will carry out the will of the puppet masters.

NO. Like I said, I want the majority of the people to ...

We have reached the point where the house and senate should never pass any law, enact any measure, or make any binding legal decisions without a vote of the people ... the Constitution itself is only the majority of the people on a piece of parchment ...

Actually, there are several small thorium reactors in use today in the USA and abroad. As I said, India and France (and others) are looking to go large-scale in the next few years. The only growing pains we face are those that come from weaning ourselves off our strident belief in big oil to solve all our energy problems. In other words, we need to have the guts and the intelligence to stand up to them politically.

Popeye's rocks. A 25 mile round trip from here. No Long John Silver's never drain and rarely screen. Adds a special something to the fried fish.

I hate the seal hunt. I've told that to Rat. H. Fink many times. I've also asked him to get the Hollywood Bimbos wearing the fur to stop it.

He refuses to do it because 'Americans wearing Canadian fur is an internal matter and none of the Canadian's business.'

The seals, to my knowledge, have not been asked for their opinion.

To the untrained eye, RHF would appear to be a hypocritical idiot.

The tuner/matcher transforms whatever impedance that is connected to its 'output' to 50 ohms resistive at its 'input'. That way, a transmitter feeds into a 50 ohm load - which is normally what it will be designed to feed into.

When receiving, the same applies (although, of course, the signal is passing through the tuner/matcher from the opposite direction). Its 'input' on transmit is its 'output' on receive, so the output (which feeds the receiver) is 50 ohms - which is what most communications receivers are designed to be fed from. In practice, if purely receiving, you will normally simply twiddle the tuner/matcher for strongest signal on the receiver (ie maximum smoke). It doesn't really matter too much whether or not you actually achieve 50 ohms at the matcher 'output' port.

Or have I got things wrong?

I live in California. We once had a democratic republic, now we just have the republic ... the public servants have usurped the peoples power and taken all authority to themselves. There is noting democratic about California, we are totally ruled by the wants of the minorities ...

We are already on our second actor in the governors office ... since we can't find a real governor, we now employ actors to fill the position. Faux News invents the other half of the story and makes believe it's news. I have no problem with Faux News yacking until they're blue in their Red faces - just don't call it news, cause it ain't, and just don't make believe that it's informed commentary and opinion, because its not. It's slanted partisan demagoguery and propaganda, much of which is demonstrably fictional.

If possible, if the coax is fairly long, I'd try and 'acquire' something a bit less lossy than RG6 (at 50MHz, 5dB/100m, 1.5dB/100'. For cable TV, RG11 (3.1dm/100m, 0.95dB/100') is sometimes a 'long drop' alternative to RG6 or RG7. But you can do better than that. A Google should bring up specs. This site gives a good selection. The CATV trunk cables look interesting, but will usually be literally a bit 'too hard to handle'.

It's more a question of what is 50 ohms? As in the input impedance of this receiver is 50 ohms and performance degrades rapidly if the source impedance is not 50 ohms, or this radio has an unbalanced input socket on the back so we'll say it's 50 ohms but it does not really matter.

It's even more complicated by the fact that most receivers that are designed for 50 ohm input, are not 50 ohms throughout their entire range.

Some have tunable front ends, for example my Ten-Tec 509 and 544 (both transceivers) and my Drake SPR-4 receiver. My Kenwood units (receiver and transceiver) do not.

The Kenwood receiver has both a coax (claimed to be 50 ohm) and separate binding post antenna input with the binding post one having 50 ohm and 600 ohm connections.

In my experience, connecting a random wire antenna to any made no difference, they all worked the same for the same antenna.

Using a coax feedline (and connecting it to the coax input) made a big difference in noise, but that's due to the amount of noise produced by me and my neighbors.

As for an antenna tuner, or external preselector, in my experience they just shift signals up or down the s-meter scale, without changing the signal to noise ratio. In fact, I've taken to using the antenuator on the Kenwood to shift everything down, so I hear less noise. Signals are also weaker, but the audio gain control compensates for that.

Obviously you can not make a general statement from that as every receiver is different and probably so is every antenna.

I assume if you had a receiver with a less tight filtering system, or a looser front end, it would be a boon to use a preselector, or an antenna tuner as one.

My Sony ICF-2010 really does get a performance boost using my Ameco PT-3, which is a preselector and 18db (adjustable) gain pre-amp.

So yes, tuning your antenna tuner for "maximum smoke" would give you a louder signal, but it may or may not give you a better one. YMMV.

Since this is an SWL group, a more meaningful number would be 15 mHz, and I'm not sure that a loss of 1.5dB is going to noticable. 5dB would, but how many people have 100m runs of coax?

Some receivers probably don't even have a good 50 ohm input impedance in ANY part of their tuning range.

Are you saying that there are likely to be problems when using a tuner/matcher between an antenna and a receiver? I think that such problems may happen, but are probably rare.

I recall that it was the same with my old R107 WW2 receiver (made in 1943?). It has a low-impedance balanced dipole input, and a high-impedance long wire input. With one side of the balanced input connected to the ground/case, and a single wire antenna, you can't really tell any difference, whichever input you use.

You might expect this. Even in the absence of manmade interference, at HF, the SNR is essentially determined by the SNR of the signal coming from the antenna. The receiver adds negligible noise (well, up to around 20MHz).

Are you running the RF gain at maximum? Apart from (usually) being necessary to obtain the 'correct' S-meter reading, when you are actually listening, it's a good idea to back it off as far as is necessary to keep the AGC just working (on SSB, at least). Of course, using the front end attenuator does allow the AGC to function flat out but, again on SSB, even with the best of receivers, you still get the inevitable rise of background noise during gaps in the speech (especially if the gaps are long). I find this very unpleasant - especially on strong signals.
Somehow, the AGC time constant never seems to be correct - for my ears, at least.

Some receivers are easily overloaded when fed from a good antenna (especially if the input attenuator - if present - is switched 'out').
They are sometimes unusable unless the 'pre-input' signal is filtered.
In such cases, the primary requirement is a preselector - and not a matcher. A 'matcher' may - or may not - be sufficiently selective to provide sufficient filtering action. There times when it may provide little - or no - rejection of those signals which are upsetting the receiver (even if these are a long way from the frequency you are trying to receive).

And I'm sure that, on the odd occasion, a tuner/matcher may actually make reception worse. If so, it is probably not what the receiver needs
- or rather, its design is not what the receiver wants. As I said, many receivers need preselection rather than antenna system matching. Maybe some need both.

If you have a tuner/matcher designed for 50 ohms and the receiver does not have a 50 ohm impedance, it might not work. It depends upon the receiver's ability to work with input impedances that don't match it, the tuner's ability to match other than 50 ohm impedances and so on.
As you say, probably rare.

This does not have a dipole input it has a coax jack (antenna 1) and three binding posts (ground, 50 ohm, 600 ohm) for antenna 2.

I would not know, I have not been what could be described as out in they countryside in years. I joke that it used to be when a new town was being built the first thing that went up was a flagpole. Now it's a cell tower.

I've tried both. To my ears the sometimes keeping it at max but using the antenuator works best, sometimes reducing the rf gain works best, and sometimes both works best. It's a combination of the signals, propigation and noise.

I'm sure some of the cheap portables I have will do that, but the ones that have outside antennas have good front ends.

This comes back to the original question, how well does a 1:9 transformer really help? The article I posted the link to says that it does in a low noise environment with a high noise receiver. With a low noise receiver in a high noise environment it helps less. Less was undefined and not measured in the article.

At one time someone was selling a universal matching dipole center insulator.
It claimed to match any dipole at an swr approaching 1:1 over the HF ham/SWBC bands and CB. It really did. Inside was a 50 ohm resistor.

I wonder how well it would perform as a random wire matching transformer?
If it would reduce my s9+ noise to s0 or s1, and proportionaly reduce any received signals, it would. :-)

With China and India coming on-line to becoming the Worlds Biggest Industrial Nations : Expect the Present CO2 Levels to INCREASE by 33% to 50% within the Next 10~25 Years : Even -if- the USA was Completely De-Industrialized and got all of it's Goods from Overseas this INCREASE in CO2 would still be in the range of 25% to 33% within the Next 10~25 Years.

1 - Last Century's {Pre-2000} Ecological Bag Boy Nation was the USA due to Over Consumption.

2 - This Century's {2000+} 1ST Ecological Bag Boy Nation is going tobe China due to Over Production for the World Market and the Double Whammy of Over Consumption by the Chinese themselves.

{Twice the USA or Europe/Russia or The Rest

Then this Century's {2000+} 2ND Ecological Bag Boy Nation is going to be India due to Over Production for the World Market and the Double themselves. {Equal to China}

NOTE - Both China and India Get a Pass on all

I was researching specifications and found this on a discussion of an Icom TX:

There are apparently TWO slightly different FL-44A filters. The earlier model has a slightly wider bandwidth and steeper skirts than the later model.
No word yet on how to tell them apart.

Apparently one version is 2.4 kHz at -6dB/4.0 kHz at -60dB The other being 2.3 kHz at -6dB/4.2 kHx at -60dB.
I know that there are serial numbers on these filters, does anyone know how to tell which is which?

If one is truly looking into the not-so-brightly-lit near future I can almost predict that Copper is the most valuable commodity. Yes, the Same here. You'd think they would have given him a medal with Palin's 'bust' on it.

It could have been a Bush protester for all I care. The principle of the thing is what's frightening.

Could it have been a setup? There was sure a lot of exposure to the banner. The media gets an image of a Patriot exercising his rights when the evil Obama forces take him away.

Now that I think about it, it seems likely to be a propaganda piece.

I think I've been had.

And we may never find that out. That scull,hidden away for 60+ years may be a forgery altogether. In postwar Europe (and practically everywhere else) many people claimed Schicklgruber didn't disappear off the face of the world, but quietly slipped out from bombed out Berlin to some other place (e.g.Spain) and went into seclusion in S.
America. Old rumors never die.

Old time cannibals enjoyed natural-fed victims. Nearly impossible to do now. Future cannibals have to adapt to genetically modified ration.
And artificial limbs.

The new display makes the R30A radio larger than the old R30/C/CC versions, less handy for travling.
The old display went out of production, AOR had to switch suppliers.

How ironic...seeing as we are poking our noses into other countries and telling them that they need democracy (and sometimes forcing it down their throats like in Afghanistan and Iraq), as if democracy is "one size fits all". And yet as you imply above, we may not even have true 'democracy' here.

Priceless.

If the "other half" of the truth is a lie the product is not news.

If you want to be set free stop believing your TV

You are describing a "transmatch" when used between the generator and the transmission line. This prevents the VSWR from frying the transmitter. It does nothing to make the antenna work any better. The transmitter can feed 50 Ohm co-ax directly. A tuner at the far end of the transmission line will improve radiation while matching the load to the transmission line and back to the transmitter. The radiation improvement may be negligible or more dramatic, depending on the type of antenna. When receiving you don't worry about frying the transistors (unless you have a 2001D/2010!) so you just want to make sure you don't break the hose rule (NO Higher Z generator into Lower Z load). That is why a 9:1 transformer works OK for receiving. If you transmit through it the transmitter will see close to a short circuit if the antenna is resonant.

I wouldn't consider buying a receiver for serious listening if it didn't have the ability to turn off the AGC completely, and if it din't have an RF gain control. You can get SSB to sound like FM. Back when GHFS was happening you could leave it on 11176 USB 24/7 and never hear anything between the calls except the occasional chirpsounder bloop. If you were also listening to 8993 on another radio, you'd hear the same bloop a half second earlier or later, give or take.

Oh, of course - my point is that people who abide by the law will follow this law, and people who don't, won't. Nothing will change if MJ is made legal, and the law won't be any more or less effective than it is for alcohol (which is arguably a worse drug). Heck, it's technically illegal to drive with too much Tylenol in your system, but people still do it.

I favor decriminalization of marijuana, BTW.

I would say that none of the wars the United States has been involved in since 1861 were "good."

Buchanan's book is worthwhile, but General Smedley Butler's _War is a Racket_ is more powerful, because it comes directly from a man who participated in the prosecution of wars for illusory or dissimulated ends:

I smoked a marijuana cigarette once.

Bruce, there are no 'good' wars.

But, occasionally, there are 'necessary' wars.

Of course I am.

>This prevents the VSWR from frying the transmitter.

Of course it does.

> It does nothing to make the antenna work any better.

Well, it certainly doesn't change the match of the antenna. However, it does match the combination of antenna plus feeder.

Consider that good old-fashioned multiband antenna for the HF amateur bands - 132' centre-fed, fed using low-loss 450 or 600 ohm twin feeder, with a transmatch at the shack end. The antenna feed impedance will vary greatly from band to band, and is highly unlikely to be a match for the feeder on any of them. As a result, there will be a considerable SWR on the feeder, and the impedance at the transmitter end will also be all over the place. However, with a transmatch at the transmitter, this arrangement performs very satisfactorily on all the HF amateur bands. This is because the high impedance feeder has inherently much lower loss than most coaxes. If you do the same thing with an endfed wire and coax, almost certainly it isn't going to work as well - especially on the higher HF frequencies. But it does work.

> The transmitter can feed 50 Ohm co-ax directly.

But only if the impedance looking into the 50 ohm coax is 50 ohms.

> A tuner at the far end of the transmission line will improve radiation >while matching the load to the transmission line and back to the >transmitter.

Of course it does. But, unless you invest in an auto-tuner, it's not easy to adjust the far-end tuner. And, even if you invest in an auto-tuner, it only works if you transmit first.

> The radiation improvement may be negligible or more dramatic, >Lower Z load). That is why a 9:1 transformer works OK for receiving.

Well, it's a compromise. On average, it improves the matching between the antenna and the feeder, so it is 'a good thing'.

> If you transmit through it the transmitter will see close to a short >circuit if the antenna is resonant.

It all depends on which resonance. If it's halfwave resonant (or multiples), the antenna impedance will be very high (5000 ohms?) and, even with the 9:1 step-down, the coax would still see a load of a lot more than 50 ohms at the antenna end. If it's quarterwave resonant (or odd multiples), the antenna feed impedance will be low (35 ohms?), and yes, the 9:1 step-down will mean that the coax sees a very low impedance load. But, with such mismatched conditions, the impedance back at the transmitter/receiver end will depend on the electrical length of the coax, its Zo, and its loss.

Using a 9:1 impedance transformer certainly isn't a prefect system. One posting said that you could actually transmit low power through it. However, it probably won't be very efficient - especially as ferrite transformers do NOT like working under mismatched conditions. You have a good chance of burning out the transformer. One the other hand, using the equally imperfect 'tuner-in-the-shack' method, you can transmit reasonably high power - although, if the coax is lossy, quite a bit of your power simply heats it up.

I don't care at all for all these "yay for my team, to Hell with your team" Republican/Democrat posts -- both teams are on the side of the globalists and Zionists as far as I can see.

But in response to you, Dave, I did want to say that plenty of people, many millions I'm sure, don't drink alcohol and have never done so -- and the same goes for mind-altering drugs.

I raised chickens and they were cannibals, they ate their weak if you

Me? Rarely, maybe three times a year; but yes I do. The smell of Nothing odd at all about them simply stating what Obama has already admitted to openly.

What's odd is that for 8 years straight all we heard was how Bush allegedly used drugs in his younger years from folks like you and you all screaming that such activity automatically made him unfit to hold office yet you showed up in droves to vote for a man who freely admitted to using cocaine, marijuana and other such vices.
It's always been funny how the opinions of liberals change based upon whether or not one is refering to a democrat.

Average citizens cannot be trusted with economic decisions that require balancing immediate costs and long-term benefits, according to environmentalists.

•CFL manufacturers claim that a 13-watt CFL emits the same amount of light as a 60-watt incandescent, but it doesn't seem to work that way in the real world. I've been in CFL-lit hotel rooms where I need a flashlight to read my dog-eared copy of The Road to Serfdom.

•Warm-up time: it takes up to 5 minutes for a CFL to reach full strength, which may be related to the point above (why CFLs seem less bright). My friend has installed them in a hallway where illumination is needed only for the thirty seconds it takes to navigate the staircase. Not ideal when Grandma visits and can't see the skateboard on the stairs.

•Few CFLs last for their advertised lifetimes of five years or more. Many people report replacing them after one year, making those return on investment numbers a bit less rosy. Using them in ceiling fixtures, on dimmers or timers, and for less than fifteen minutes per use reduce their life.

•CFLs contain mercury and should be returned to a hazardous waste center for disposal. Studies assume a 25% recycling rate, with the rest going into landfills. (The Westinghouse website recommends recycling only when disposing of "a large quantity" of fluorescent tubes and doesn't mention how to dispose of their CFLs.) According to a 2008 Yale study, burning coal to supply electricity to incandescent bulbs emits more mercury per bulb than a CFL contains, but regions that rely on cleaner fuels like natural gas experience greater mercury contamination with the introduction of CFLs. Why would environmentalists advocate to bring a toxic product into every home?

•Cleaning up a broken CFL doesn't require a haz-mat team, but you have to take significant precautions to avoid mercury contamination of living areas.

•Manufacturing CFLs is labor-intensive. No CFLs are made with expensive U.S. labor; most are made in China, where hundreds of factory workers in CFL plants have been hospitalized for mercury poisoning. The last major light bulb factory in the U.S., a GE plant in Winchester, VA, closed earlier this month.

•CFLs require six times as much energy to manufacture as incandescent bulbs, not to mention -- if you're concerned about such things -- the carbon footprint of shipping them from China.

•CFLs appear to cause migraines and epileptic seizures in a small number of people. Other health risks are being studied.

•CFLs work poorly in cold temperatures -- as a wintertime front porch light, for example. In cold climates, the heat of incandescent bulbs is a useful -- if inefficient -- byproduct.

•CFLs degrade the quality of the electric current (so-called "dirty electricity" with uneven sine waves) on a circuit into which they are plugged, causing problems for other electronic devices and possible health hazards to humans.

It’s refreshing that finally the Progressive/Liberal label is being recognized for what it is. It’s not Socialism, either. Really. Even the Marxism label falls short. (There is no Engelsism, is there?)

A Communist by any other name is still a Communist, whether of the Big “C” (card-carrying type) or small “c” (fellow traveler).

In 1848 the Karl Marx and Freidrich Engels co-authored Communist Manifesto was completed and published at the request of London’s Communist League.

If you don’t want to read the whole Manifesto, read the 10 Planks.

Educate yourself.

[...] now comes the news of HR 3534 Consolidated Land, Energy, Aquatic Restoration Act of 2009 (CLEAR Act), described as “the globalist bill designed to give away our land, oceans, adjacent land masses and Great Lakes to [the United Nations], and [which] makes us pay $900 million per year until 2040.”

HR 3534 is a thinly disguised permanent roadblock to American energy which drives American companies out of the Gulf, delays future drilling, increases dependency on foreign oil, implements climate change legislation and youth education programs; but most important, it mandates membership in the Law of the Sea Treaty without the required two-thirds vote to ratify it in the U.S. Senate. . . .

The House passed the CLEAR Act (HR 3534) 209-193, July 30, 2010. This bill was originally introduced July 8, 2009, but was resurrected by the recent Deep Water Horizon oil spill crisis. According to govtrack.us, a debate may be taking place on a companion bill in the Senate, rather than on this particular bill. This bill was read for the second time Aug. 4, 2010, and placed on the Senate Legislative Calendar under General Orders, Calendar No. 510. No official Senate Bill number exists as of yet. . . .

America will be forced to become a member of the UN Law of the Sea Treaty (aka: LOST), circumventing the normal two-thirds U.S. Senate vote necessary for ratification of any treaty. This was accomplished surreptitiously via Section 106 of the bill, which specifies that Executive Orders, rules, regulations, directives or delegations of authority that precede the effective date of this act are applicable to the CLEAR Act.

Wise ancestor intervenes and wisely opines....

Big talk on bill not go with facts. Big energy cartels talk much, spend much, but do little for environment - keep wanting to dig up oil, coal, gas and then charge lots for it. Big holes in ground, oil leak in sea, too bad.
Make lotta talk about "clean" coal...."environment this", "environment that".... then they keep on drill holes, make mess, raise prices....
Law of sea not at issue here, law at issue is "heads we win", "tails

YOU lose"!
Big cartels know only one thing..MONOPOLY, like board game, only for real - they control, you pay (get it?!!?)

Grandfather Chan say, follow trail of greenbacks out of pocket and see where go, this where problem lie.

Instead of dig dig, just sit back, get lotta mirrors and concentrators and soak up free energy. In place where not much sun, try wind, or sea tides....NO MESS necessary. But....BIG problem for cartels, NO WAY to get monopoly on the sun, wind or sea.

I've had them for years.

Low operating cost.

LEDs will be even better!

I haven't tried the CFL outside but I had regular Fluorescent lighting in a barn and when below 32F they didn't work worth a damn.

I think we're are going to transition to the more expensive LED lighting bit going from $0.30 bulbs to $6.00 bulbs would be a hard sell so the CFL is an intermediate to acclimate the consumers.

60-watt incandescent don't put out a lit of light either.

The good thing about CF is you can use more or brighter bulbs for more light and still use less electricity.

There is no doubt, if it gets 5 degrees below zero chances are they will not work anymore. Around 20 degrees it they take a long time to get going. But have had on in the kitchen that is on most nights for at least and hour for 5 or so years. have had the same one at my office for about as long at that is on for at least 8 hours a day

Previous to that with regular bulbs would go through 0one of these aver 3 months.

Incandescent lamps are too futuristic for most of us, stick to whale oil or kerosene lamps. Only greenies like incandescent lamps.
progressives like you. They'll never come down in price and be cheap like the old kind we've been using for the past 500 years.

DITTO THAT AND MORE :
These Spiral {Mushroom} CFLs rated at a 100 Watt Incandescent Bulb was used before.

NOTE - In a Kitchen where they are switch On&Off many times Daily and are "On" for 8~12 Hours Daily these last about 3-Years* before they don't Light-Up anymore.

Doing-The-Math :
10 Hours x 365 Days x 3 Years = 10,950 Service Hours

Same here.
Buy a Pack of Four Incandescent Bubs for One

For educational purposes:
"This bill assesses a Conservation Fee of $2 per barrel of oil and 20 cents per million BTUs of natural gas for all leases on Federal onshore and offshore lands (Section 802). This will jettison America's energy prices for oil and gas through the roof!

Truth is, HR 3534 could have been stopped in the House and wasn't. Why? Because 21 absent Republicans chose not to show up for this critical vote, while another REP just voted Present: U.S. Rep. Gary Miller (CA-42). This legislation was so egregious; more than a handful of Democrats voted "nay" which makes the Republicans' absence in the House chamber for the vote even more questionable. Be reminded that 193 + 17 absent votes would have killed the bill.

The Consolidated Land, Energy, Aquatic Restoration Act of 2009 (aka: CLEAR Act, HR 3534) gives away ownership of America's oceans to the United Nations, and sectors America into nine geographic areas. This bill possesses a cap and trade/climate change component as well.

America will be forced to become a member of the UN Law of the Sea Treaty (aka: LOST), circumventing the normal two-thirds U.S. Senate vote necessary for ratification of any treaty. This was accomplished surreptitiously via Section 106 of the bill, which specifies that Executive Orders, rules, regulations, directives or delegations of authority that precede the effective date of this act are applicable to the CLEAR Act."

Delaware was a slave state prior to the War between the States..
Delaware never seceded from the Union. Delaware repealed slavery when the 13th amendment took effect. Delaware was never a Southern Confederacy member. Delaware is above the Mason -Dixon line.

Well, yes. And no. For me the term 'socialism' is used as a broad, encompassing, generic term that includes communism, Communism, Marxism, many so-called 'third ways' (fascism, Nazism, democratic socialism, liberalism, progressivism), Fabianism, and many more such similar ideologies. I understand that some define socialism differently, for example, as an historical step towards Marxism, and therefore distinct from it, but one needs a word to group together under one label all these closely related movements, because they have so much in common. What else would one use generically?
Collectivists? Radical egalitarians? Vermin? It seems to me that since so many related ideologies call themselves socialists we should not reject the more general definition of socialism.

The first ones I bought were not as good as they are now.
They have made a lot of improvements.

This used to bug me but I actually find this a benefit now. It is a lot less stressful to have the light start out dim and get brighter over the next few minutes. I recently experienced the harsh glare of an incandescent and found it intolerable.

While the CFL are improving the incandescent has gone down in quality. I have some lights I leave on all the time. The incandescent would have to be replaced every few weeks. I have had some CFL's on for over 3 years and drawing 1/6 the power.

There are some drawbacks to CFL but improvements are coming.
It doesn't matter what the newer bulbs are to me as long as they offer some of the benefits of CFLs.
From your article:
"A new generation of more efficient incandescent bulbs is on the horizon, and LED bulbs show great promise. CFLs make sense for some applications, but at best they will be a transitional product."

Yes - With CFL Bulbs : New Is Better

When you first get a CFL and Install the Bulb :
Turn the CFL "ON" and Leave It On for 15~20 Minutes to Fully Energize {Excite} the Coating in the Bulb. Usually -if- this is done when the CFL Bulb is Installed -it- will then come-on to Full Brightness thereafter when the Switch is Flipped "ON" Plus the newer Electronic Ballasts are better at the Rapid/Instant 'On' function and the Frequency has been increased to reduce the Flicker that was seen in the earlier ones.

I can be too baked to be able to speak and can still drive safely. Marijuana use, by itself, does not necessarily impair one's ability to safely operate machinery. It is nothing like alcohol nor sedatives nor narcotics.

If "impairment" is the criteria, the mere presence of cannabinoids in the blood should not automatically lead to a conclusion of impairment. I've been smoking dope for 43 years, 3 months. I have never had an accident while high (but I've avoided a couple with superhuman feats of automotive agility). Knock on morning wood.

I'm a generous and giving person.

I don't mind communing with people I want to commune with, like maybe Taylor Swift. But I'm picky. I don't like it when someone else picks the ones I _must_ share with. That's tyranny.

Voluntary socialism is all right. No one should stop you from setting up a commune and making it socialist as all get out. And, I think, no one _is_ stopping you. From Oneida to the intentional communities that even now dot the Ozarks and the Appalachians, it's an American tradition.

But some people, styling themselves "socialist" or some other label-of-the-moment, want to get their hands on the property of people who never agreed to share it, in order to get votes or satisfy their longing to bring low their betters, all with the threat of policemen and courts and jail if you refuse to "comply." I don't approve.

And it's often the super-rich (Ford Foundation, Soros, Zionist media billionaires, et cetera) who are behind these forcible-socialism schemes -- they craft them, so they know they'll be exempt. And they do have an agenda: to rule you. Hell, to _own_ you. So naturally they'd like to confiscate the wealth of their up-and-coming competitors and throw a few bread-crumbs to the underclass to buy their votes. Be honest: Isn't that how it really works?

Far better to end the creation of money out of thin air by the banking system (the oligarch's main means of theft), and make limited liability artificial persons ("corporations") illegal. It would also help tremendously to 1) have an intelligence and knowledge test for voting, and 2) to reverse the current disastrous dysgenic trend in birthrates, so that those with the best genes have more children than those with the worst. Neither socialism nor capitalism nor any "ism" works well with a Third World gene pool.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

The yellowish-orange light that incandescent lamps give off is similar to the color of the light candles emit.

There's no reason that we should stick to that puny sickly color.

CFL lamps can do a good job of emulating daylight.

Regarding energy. When I had incandescent lamps in our high hats I could warm the room by simply turning the lights on.

This was an indicator of how much extra energy (and money) I needed to waste during air-conditioning season.

No more. I had these for years. I would never go back.

I actually researched the Fabian Socialists and was one of(if NOT the first) to bring this to the NewsGroups connecting Obama to Fabian Socialists and later I found a Video of Obama calling himself a Progressive(that video has since been scrubbed from the internet).

The difference is minor and one cult was from Europe while the other an American adaptation of the other.... They are both just the idea that the change to Socialism can be a peaceful "evolution" rather than a violent "Revolution"......

Coincidentally we are in what looks like a COUP where we are being pushed into Socialism by the progressives that have a hidden agenda for what they are doing, all the while trying to deceive the public of the real goals.

Were it that Progressives were up front about their goals, I would have little to worry about since most people aren't so stupid as to sign on with the Socialist Kooks and their utopian quest..... but the fact that there's a goal that's being shielded by obfuscation and lies makes the Progressives more dangerous than the Communists that pronounce their ideological goals and will use a gun to exact those goals.

The communist deserves a certain amount of respect as someone with Character..... but the Fabians/Progressives we face now will befriend you and lull you into a passive state of mind, then sink their knife deep in your back as you sleep.

The problem w/ defining socialism (or communism) is that its ugliness is apparent when purely and concisely defined. A socialist will never define communism, instead they come up w/ all sorts of pretty ways to polish that turd.

I've studied it somewhat, and distilled what seems to be the essence:

Socialism: benevolence through compulsion

Communism: production through compulsion

Totalitarianism: compulsion in all things

Note that there is no mention of ownership, who or what controls, majority/minority, etc. All of those are canards and irrelevant to the core -- and that core is compulsion.

I've challenged many to posit alternative definitions or to refute mine. The responses (few have actually be substantive) have been defective, or upon closer examination (i.e. decomposition) justify my definitions.

I think they are all very closely related, and all deserve to be called socialists. For me they are all peas in the same pod. The most important thing to me is that they all have essentially the same goals, they all get you to the same place, whether they involve a nationalist (Nazism) or internationalist (Marxism) bent, a revolutionary (Marxism and its various subtypes) or evolutionary (Fabianism) mechanism of achieving the goals, whether they claim to incorporate capitalism (various third ways claim to), or use state corporatism (fascism, which is just another form of third way in my opinion), whether they do or do not involve militarism or imperialism, etc. -- all forms of socialism have more similarities than differences. All forms involve a paradoxical form of radical egalitarianism as a primary goal, some form of belief in collectivism in contrast to individualism, some form of wealth equalization for the masses, a hatred of true free-market capitalism, an antipathy towards the concept of private property, radical ideas of what constitute "rights," and, above all, as a practical matter, the imposition of some form of leadership by the "elite" (even in so-called democratic socialism).

They are not really the elite, of course. They are more like self-appointed elitists, people convinced of their own superiority over the rest of us mere mortals.

The goals to me are essentially the same for communists, Communists (I firmly believe that Obama is at heart a Marxist), and progressives. They therefore can all work together seamlessly. To me it scarcely makes a difference which of the many socialist labels they give to themselves.

> The communist deserves a certain amount of respect as someone with

I agree that those who openly label themselves Communists are more honest about their goals. But, based on the fact that the actual CPUSA readily supports Democrats, esp. this administration, the true card-carrying Communists know very well that the only meaningful difference between them and Democrats is the theoretical means of achieving the SAME goals.

Well, I'm not sure it can be defined this way. I agree that the definition has been muddied. I will also agree that your distillation incorporates a great deal of truth. It is amazing that people who believe in radical egalitarianism paradoxically believe that only certain people are smart enough to dictate to the rest of the herd.

Again, I would say that your distillation contains a great deal of truth.

More likely a man good at diplomatic compromise.

I use a combination of old fashioned and new fashioned CFLs.

As already mentioned, it makes no sense to use CFLs in a hallway or stairway where the light is only on for less than a minute.

It also makes no sense to use CFLs in decorative bathroom lights or ANY light where the fixture points down like an upside down tulip or a ceiling canister light. The upside down tulip or canister builds up heat which will kill a capacitor in the CFL.

I also discovered a very interesting problem with CFLs and pets. The old fashioned fluorescent bulbs use a magnetic ballast that operates at 60hz and the flicker would drive some people crazy. The new CFLs operate at 20,000 hz and this " drive em crazy" problem has gone away. HOWEVER, the 20,000hz of the CFLs emit a 20,000hz sound that dogs and cats can hear and it drives THEM crazy.

In an experiment, a CFL was put in a single room where a dog would frequently lay. When the CFL was installed, the dog wouldn't go in that particular room any more.

My cats seem to have no response to our CFLs.

How do you know?

Try the experiment where you use incadescent bulbs in all of your rooms and put a CFL in his/her favorite sleeping place.

I was looking for old treatments of this topic. It is not the first time I have been involved in a discussion of socialism and its definition. I found this old thread, not the best discussion from the past, but which contains some discussion of the topic. If anyone thinks it worth the time to read it, some of my opinions from 2001 are to be found in messages 10 and 15. Hope the link works.

No, because he didn't advocate either (or neither) through compulsion.

Note: compulsion is the key element, not property.

Don't worry about jane.
jane is detached from the 21st century.
jane uses incandescent lamps and an outdoor TV antenna.
She has no clue about CNN, FOX, MSNBC, C-Span1, 2, and 3 jane thinks Herbert Hoover, Richard Nixon, St Reagan, and the bushes are great American heroes

I never saw a cat or dog affected by CFL lamps.

Maybe you could enlighten us to the "hidden agenda" and their "real goals".

As to trying to push us into socialism, are "they" stupid...or just blind?

Blind to the fact that socialism failed miserably in Russia and North Korea and that China is almost more Capitalist than we are. Heck, even Fidel Castro just said a few weeks ago that their system "doesn't work for them [Cubans] any more". Why would anyone even want socialism with a track record like that?

Or is "socialism" your code word for "New World Order", one world government or world domination by a select few???

Asking someone like Obama to give-up their ideology is like asking the Happiness is a wider scope since you can pursue property if it makes you happy. Or you can pursue poverty if your name is Obama. But we each have the right as an individual and NOT as a Nation.

At least the Fabians had George Bernard Shaw to entertain you while they tinkered with their version of heaven on earth. The modern progressive is a boring piece of work.

What is Islam?

Islam and Muslims

Islam is an Arabic word which means total submission to God, peace, purity, acceptance and commitment. As a religion, Islam calls for complete acceptance of the teachings and guidance of God. A Muslim is one who freely and willingly accepts the supreme power of God and strives to organize his life in total accord with the teachings of God. He also works for building social institutions which reflect the guidance of God. "Muhammadanism" is a misnomer for Islam and offends its very spirit since the Prophet Muhammad was a messenger of God, and not a divine being worshipped by Muslims. Muslims use the word "Allah" for the English word "God". The understanding of Deity in Islam differs from some of the connotations in the English word, God. For the convenience of English speaking readers, the word God is used in this brochure except when the word "Allah" is in the quotations from the Qur'an.

Continuity of The Message
Islam is not a new religion. It is, in essence, the same message and guidance which God revealed to all His previous messengers. "Say: We believe in Allah and that which was revealed to us, and that which was revealed to Abraham and Ishmael and Isaac and Jacob and the tribes and that which was given to Moses and Jesus and to the Prophets from their Lord; We make no distinction between any of them, and to Him we submit". Qur'an 3:83. The message which was revealed to the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) is Islam in its comprehensive, complete and final form.

The Five Pillars of Islam
Every action done with the awareness that it fulfills the Will of God is considered an act of worship in Islam. But it is the specific acts of worship termed the Pillars of Islam which provide the framework of Muslim spiritual life. These are given below:

1. The DECLARATION OF FAITH. "I bear witness that there is no one worthy of worship except God (Allah), and that Muhammad is His servant and messenger." The Prophethood of Muhammad obliges Muslims to follow his exemplary life in every respect.

2. PRAYERS are prescribed five times a day as a duty towards God. Prayer strengthens and enlivens belief in God and inspires man to higher morality. It purifies the heart and controls temptation, wrong-doing, and evil.

3. FASTING during the month of Ramadan. This means abstention from food, beverages, and sex from dawn to sunset, and curbing evil intentions and desires. It teaches love, sincerity, and devotion. It develops patients, unselfishness, social conscience, and willpower to bear hardship.

4. ZAKAH is a proportionately fixed contribution collected from the wealth and earning of the well to do and rich. It is spent on the poor and needy in particular, and the welfare of the society in general. The payment of Zakah purifies ones income and wealth and helps to establish economic balance and social justice in the society.

5. HAJJ, or pilgrimage to the Ka'bah in Makkah, once in a lifetime, provided one has the means to undertake the journey.

Oneness of God
Islam enjoins faith in the oneness and sovereignty of God, which creates an awareness of the unity and meaningfulness of the universe and of man's place in it. This belief frees him from all fears and superstitions by making him conscious of the presence of the Almighty God and of man's obligations to Him. But this realization must be expressed and tested in action. Faith alone is not enough. Belief in one God requires that we look upon all humanity as one family under the universal omnipotence of God - the Creator and Nourisher of all. Islam rejects the idea that there is a "chosen people" making pure intention, faith in God, and good deeds the only way to heaven. Thus a direct relationship is established with God, open to all alike, without any discrimination or intercession.

The Qur'an and Hadith
The Qur'an is the last revealed word of God and the basic source of Islamic teachings and laws. It deals with a variety of subjects including the basic beliefs of Islam, morality, worship, knowledge, wisdom, God-and-man relationships, and relations among human beings. Comprehensive teachings on which sound systems of social justice, politics, economics, legislation, jurisprudence, law and international relations can be built from an important part of the Holy Qur'an. Though Prophet Muhammad did not receive a formal education, the Qur'an, as soon as it was revealed to him in the spoken word, was committed to writing by his secretaries. In this way every word was written down and preserved during his lifetime by his companions. The original and complete text of the Qur'an is in Arabic and translations of its meaning in most known languages are available in major libraries and bookstores. Hadith, the teachings, sayings and actions of Prophet Muhammad, accurately reported and collected by his devoted companions, explain and elaborate the Qur'anic verses.

Concept of Worship
Islam does not teach ritualism. It places great emphasis on intention and action. To worship God is to love him and to act upon His commands in every aspect of life, to enjoin goodness and forbid wrong-doing and oppression, to practice charity and justice and to serve Him by serving mankind. The Qur'an presents this sublime concept in the following manner: "It is not righteousness that you turn your faces to the East or West, but righteous is he who believes in Allah and the Last Day and the Angels and the Scripture and the Prophets; and gives his wealth for love of Him to kinsfolk and to orphans and the needy and the wayfarer and to those who ask, and sets slaves free; and observes proper worship and pays the Zakah. And those who keep their treaty when they make one, and the patient in tribulation and adversity and time of stress; such are those who are sincere. Such are the Godfearing". Qur'an 2:177.

Man, A Free Agent
Man is the highest creation of God and he has a free will to make his own decisions. God has shown him the right path, and the life of Prophet Muhammad provides a perfect example for achieving success and salvation. Islam stands for the sanctity of human personality and confers equal rights on all without distinction of race, nationality or sex. The law of God set down in the Qur'an and exemplified in the life of the Prophet is supreme in all cases. It applies equally to the prince and the pauper, the ruler and the ruled, the saint and the sinner.

Man's Accountability to God
Man's life is not limited to the short span of earthly existence. On the day of judgement the entire human race will be resurrected; everyone will appear before the Almighty God and face the consequences of his deeds in this life. Thus, life in the Hereafter is a continuation of the earthly life. Belief in man's accountability to God gives a sense and meaning to life and differentiates human beings from animals and inanimate objects. It serves as a reminder against crime, corruption, immorality, and injustice.

Human Rights
Islam protects all noble values and human rights. Freedom, equality, justice, and the right to life, liberty, and security of person are of prime concern in Islamic law. "Whosoever kills a human being for other than manslaughter or corruption in the earth, it shall be as if he had killed all mankind, and whosoever saves the life of one, it shall be as if he had saved the life of all mankind..." Qur'an 5:32. Islam places great emphasis on social justice. It opposes all those who exploit, oppress and deal unjustly with people. " O ye who believe: Be steadfast witnesses for Allah in equity and let not hatred of any people seduce you that you deal not justly. Be just; that is nearer to piety". Qur'an 5:8.

Science and Technology
Islam encourages the use of science and the scientific method. Acquisition of knowledge is obligatory on every Muslim, male and female. In Islam, science and technology should be used for moral ends and serve all legitimate needs of mankind. Moreover, both are viewed as yet another means to understand and see the power and glory of God. "He it is Who created for you all that is in the earth." Qur'an 2:29.

"It is your Lord, the Most Bounteous, Who taught by the pen, taught man that which he knew not..." Qur'an 96:2- 5. "We shell show them our Signs on the horizons and within themselves until it will be manifest unto them that it is the Truth..." Qur'an 41:53.

Islam: The Cure for Modern Ailments
Racism is a major problem in many materially advanced countries. Prejudice and discrimination against racial groups is common phenomenon even today. For 1400 years Islam has shown in practice how racism can be ended. The Islamic social scene, particularly during the Hajj, is a unique example of the brotherhood of men of all races and nations under One God. Similarly, the family, the basic unit of civilization has also become something of a problem in the West. It is in visible decay. The family system of Islam brings the rights of husband, wife, children, and relatives into a fine equilibrium. Islam nourishes generosity in the family and holds it together under the clear Qur'anic laws and teachings of the Prophet Muhammad, peace be upon him.

Some Misconceptions About Islam
It is unfortunate that some teachings of Islam have been distorted and misrepresented in the West and the communist world. The main distortions relate to the status of women, marriage and divorce, jihad or so-called "holy war", the authenticity of the prophethood of Muhammad (peace be upon him), and the distinction between the Qur'an and the Hadith. The accurate teachings of Islam on these matters can be obtained only from authentic Islamic writings.

My house doesn't have a chimney.I will tie a rope around a 2'' by 4'' inside my attic and throw the other end out the attic vent.Actually, three ropes.One of the ropes, I will tie to my ladder.Another rope, I will hook it to my rigged up walk board.The third rope, I will tie around my waist and also use it for a hand hold when I go up and down my ladder.I don't believe in falling off of my roof.

I have a cat that freaks when I dig into a bag of crushed ice, because of the high-pitched crackling. She has no such reaction when I fire up the CFLs. I have 5 [ea] 25 Watt deliciously warm CFLs in my studio, 4 of which are base up in old school white surface mount fixtures, fed by zip cord and Scotchloks.

Once again, your post contians nothing of value and you have to resort to childish name calling.

Here are some excerpts from the GE Lighting FAQ [1].

"...these bulbs do require a short warm-up period..."

"Compact fluorescent light bulbs work best if they are left on for over 15 minutes each time they are turned on. "

"These types of lamps can take up to 3 minutes to warm-up. ... the lamp needs to warm-up in order to reach the point of most efficient operation. Frequently switching them on and off will shorten the life of the product. If the life of the lamp is shortened significantly, you will not reap the financial benefits (includes energy & life of lamp), that are common to CFL lamps."

"Totally enclosed recessed fixtures create temperatures that are too high to allow the use of a compact fluorescent bulb."

I use CFLs in a kitchen/breakfast room because I have 13 recessed ceiling "can" fixtures. The use of incadescents adds 715 watts of heat to the room. HOWEVER, due to the heat buildup in these recessed cans, the CFLs usually last less than a year. Due to the short life span of the CFLs, using CFLs does not make good economic sense, but they DO reduce the room heating down to 169 watts.

I do not use CFLs in areas of short usage, such as bathrooms, hallways, or stairways.

Jane.

In such places, an eventual switchover to LEDs might be more cost effective.

I changed the internal works of my "tophats" to accommodate the "daylight"
CFL's that have been in place for years.
There were some initial failures replaced under warranty but they are stable. They reach full brightness in seconds.

The 27 Watt CFL over my breakfast table replaces a 150 Watt incandescent lamp. This CFL required a base extender to fit the fixture.

130 year old incandescent, inefficient technology is dead.

LEDs are an even better solution when the price becomes more reasonable.

Sounds like progressive technology goes hand in hand with progressive politics.

Republicans have just offered a new (old) "Plague on America" so we can regress some more.

Sometimes progressive products aren't as progressive as one thinks.

Yes, the bulbs "appear" to be bright within seconds, the GE web site states that a CFL "needs to warm-up in order to reach the point of most efficient operation" and that that CFLs " work best if they are left on for over 15 minutes each time they are turned on. "

The advantage of using CFLs is EFFICIENCY. It makes no sense to use CFLs in a place where you will not acheive their efficiency.

I agree that LEDs are the best option when they are improved and when the price comes down. Right now, LEDs are in their initial stages.

'Best Game Ever' Broadcast Found in Bing Crosby's Wine Cellar

This shouldn't surprise anyone, as Bing Crosby was an early advocate of taping his own shows for later broadcast.

In Bing Crosby’s Wine Cellar, Vintage Baseball

By RICHARD SANDOMIR
Published: September 23, 2010

How a near pristine black-and-white reel of the entire television broadcast of the deciding game of the 1960 World Series — long believed to be lost forever — came to rest in the dry and cool wine cellar of Bing Crosby’s home near San Francisco is not a mystery to those who knew him.

Crosby loved baseball, but as a part owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates he was too nervous to watch the Series against the Yankees, so he and his wife went to Paris, where they listened by radio.

“He said, ‘I can’t stay in the country,’ ” his widow, Kathryn Crosby, said. “ ‘I’ll jinx everybody.’ ”

He knew he would want to watch the game later — if his Pirates won — so he hired a company to record Game 7 by kinescope, an early relative of the DVR, filming off a television monitor.

Crosby was so superstitious about hexing his Pirates that he and Kathryn listened to the game with their friends Charles and Nonie de Limur in Paris.

“We were in this beautiful apartment, listening on shortwave, and when it got close Bing opened a bottle of Scotch and was tapping it against the mantel,” Kathryn Crosby said. “When Mazeroski hit the home run, he tapped it hard; the Scotch flew into the fireplace and started a conflagration. I was screaming and Nonie said, ‘It’s very nice to celebrate things, but couldn’t we be more restrained?’ ”

There is no "Tea Party" to infiltrate..... tea party people are not linked to any National group, in fact there is only one National election and that's the President of the United States. Hardly a reason for a National "Tea party" all you need is to network, if nothing else th einternet should be a blueprint on how to NOT place power in person or group and to keep everything loosely connected in cells like internet server farms so that no one can shut down /OR/ take over the TEA PARTY no matter how hard they try. Because all you need to do is join a different one or start your own tea party and get members. The tea party is simply like minded people connecting on a simple political goal there is no underlying political machine and when you see that happening then you need to start fresh and let the old group dissolve.

It's good to know other tea party groups and to network with them to assist or find a rally or get outside help for a candidate you believe in but, there is no all powerful tea party "Central Committee" to tell people what to do and that would just drive people away like you left and now believe them when they say they are in control of the tea party.

I say start your own online local tea party and network with the one you left and see if people don't like you version better.

No reason for you to be involved with a National Tea Party. The whole movement is ground-up and no matter who calls themselves "the leader" they have no power. The LOCAL ELECTIONS ARE MORE IMPORTANT THAN THE ONES ON TV THAT ARE NOT DIRECTLY CONNECTED TO YOU. You need to align with another tea party or start one that's more independent and draw off like minded people from the other tea parties and in the end, the groups with the least extensive "LAUNDRY LIST" will be the ones standing because you'll have the widest appeal.

There are only three things needed for a tea party. It isn't even meant to be a lasting movement, no need for the brick and mortar investments. NO CHARTER and no need for contracts, your money needs to go directly to the candidates that you "maybe decide with others" represents your TEA PARTY the best.

The tea Party is NOT part of the conservative or Republican party. The Republican party may have some things in common with the tea party, like Smaller government, but unless Republicans have or will be voting for smaller government they get NO tea party support. Find a Democrat that supports the Tea Party Credo and support them. There is no Political party in TEA PARTY.

The Same goes for Democrats, they get no tea party support unless they have a record or promise that they'll vote for smaller government.

The Tea Party credo
1. Smaller government, with economic freedom and responsibility
2. Protect and defend the Constitution
3. National Security

You see there is NO extraneous goals to dilute the movement. Any person that wants these three things can be aligned with the tea party as much or as little as they wish. NEVER! NEVER! NEVER! give money to a political group without specific detail in writing for which that money is to be used.

I drifted away from the locals and I try to touch base with them here and there but I follow the group more than I interact, I look at their ideas and mostly I'm an online member, I'm not big on the pot-luck dinner social aspects of politics.

I'm a tea party supporter but I have no "Political party".

I am similar to a Libertarian but not quite that either.

JS,

I don't know about that for "All' of California Land.

Sometimes up here in Twain Harte, CA we stay in the high 'teens' all day; and naturally a little cooler in the nights.

But the outside CFLs seem to work OK when the Sun goes down : Naturally a few Winter Days the Outside {PhotoEye} Lights stay ON all Day.

D'Oh ! - They now make CFL Bulbs that work in all possible Installation Positions :
* Point-Up {Electronics Down & Cool}
* Point-to-the-Side {Electronics Sideways} -and-
* Point-Down {Electronics Up & Hot}
-plus-
* Enclosed Fixture = A-OK :o}

COLD WEATHER CFL BULBS :

There are now CFL Bulbs made with an Outer Glass Envelope so that they operate in Cold Weather better.

Plus some of these CFL Bulbs may have an additional Silicone Coating on the Outer Glass Envelope to improve the Very Cold Weather Performance.

CFL Bulbs they are becoming so easy to use :
Why even a "clueless halfwits" can do them right.

The 3 LEDs {3 Watts Each} lighting the Stairs

- Regarding energy. When I had incandescent lamps
- in our high hats I could warm the room by simply
- turning the lights on.

Use to see an Adz back in the 1960s for a "Heat-Tube" that went from Floor to Ceiling and had a single 100 Watt Incandescent Light Bulb in the Base. The 'Claim' was that when it was ON the Natural Convection Air would take the Chill out of the Room in an Hour. They had a Deluxe Model with a small Fan to aid in boosting the Natural Convection Air flow.

Most people that had an old Tube Type TV in a Room never knew that they were running a 300~500+ Watt Electric Heater in the Room while watching TV :o) ~ RHF

All of this is window dressing and demagoguery.

As long as worker productivity stays high and gets higher, and population gets larger, the problem won't be improved by either - or any - party. No candidate, either Dem or Rep, has a solution to this problem. Neither Capitalism nor Socialism, nor anything in between, will solve the problem. The only way to fix this issue is to drop the pop, and I guarantee you, no politician (save for a few who are routinely marginalized) has the guts to say this.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Cm67MwsYz4M

My guess is that he is still a Marxist. Certainly, he shows no scruples about keeping his hands off other people's property.

An abysmal record as executive of New Castle County, Coons promised voters he would keep taxes down. Once elected, he raised property taxes by 5 percent in 2006, by 17.5 percent in 2007 and by 25 percent!!! in 2009.

He loves taxes. Coons has proposed to raise hotel taxes, paramedic taxes and something heretofore unheard of. Coons has a proposal to raise taxes on 911 calls.

http://www.washingtonexaminer.com/opinion/columns/Chris-Coons-is-wackier-than-Christine-O_Donnell-975963-103658309.html#ixzz10UtnOkS0

Coons is endorsed by Planned Parenthood, the largest abortion provider in the United States, which was established in 1923 by a radical social activist Margaret Sanger.
Its President is Cecile Richards, a veteran labor and political organizer who has also been Deputy Chief of Staff to Nancy Pelosi.
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=7083

Coons decided to study under a Marxist professor at the University of Nairobi, Kenya.

In the months leading up to the trip abroad “leftists” on campus and college professors had begun to “challenge the basic assumptions” he had formed about America.

A class on the Vietnam War led him to “suspect…that the ideal of America as a ‘beacon of freedom and justice, providing hope for the world’ was not exactly based in reality.

http://s3.mediamatters.org/static/images/item/20100920-coonsamherst.pdf

The 'bearded Marxist' was also blind

A liberal is no more capable of recognizing socialism than a fish is capable of recognizing water, but the philosophy espoused by Marx runs through this essay.

That's not the real problem, though. The real problem is the youthful naivete that causes someone to go to a Third World country like Kenya and conclude its problems are caused by democracy and capitalism. The exact opposite is true, as should be obvious to anyone who understands politics. The typical Third World country has neither a functioning capitalist system nor a functioning democratic system.

Those few that do have such systems generally also have good economies and good living conditions. Costa Rica is an example that leaps to mind. It is infinitely more prosperous than its neighbor to the north, Nicaragua, which is still recovering from being run by the undemocratic, socialistic Sandinista Party - the very type of people that dewy-eyed students like the young Coons saw as saviors.

When I used to report from that region during the war years, I saw hundreds of clueless kids like the young Coons. They would be blathering about the wonders of socialism while the locals were standing in bread lines. Coons would seem to fit neatly into this category.

And note at the end of this essay when he blames "the slums of New York" on capitalism. It never seemed to occur to him who built the worst of those slums, and their counterparts in Newark. The most horrid high-rises were all built and/or subsidized by wise officials who extended socialist theory to housing policy. In a capitalist world, these slums never would have been built. A public-housing project is a little piece of Cuba set down right in the middle of the U.S.A. And they don't work any better here than they do in Havana.

http://blog.nj.com/njv_paul_mulshine/2010/09/post_32.html

Kenya is the common denominator between everyone’s favorite revolutionary Barack Obama. Like Mr. Obama, Coons is a relatively unknown political figure and the democrats would probably like to keep it that way.

Hey Marxist Democrats! Pyongyang, North Korea and Havana, Cuba are still a Liberal Fascist Paradise!

""Attack on America," Fox news. "Attack on civilization," Colon Powell. "Attack on democracy," Carter. "Attack on freedom," Bush. To this stupidity I scream, Hell no! Not just NO but hell no! It was an attack on the Jew capital of the world, an attack on Tel Aviv West. ..... They did not attack Harlem, nor Little Havana, nor White racists in Idaho. They went after those who have, for fifty years, slaughtered Palestinian children. You can not murder people's children with impunity. You can not perpetrate a continuous Holocaust without recriminations.

If we, or the Israelis, had done this to others it would have been a "surgical strike" followed by a well-thought-out letter of limited regret. Our generals would have laughed and bragged about the timing, accuracy and bravery of the troops. And the Jew ... of New York would, again, have danced a frenzied hora.

Yes, America, cry with me for the innocent people killed in this horrid affair. But where were your tears when Manhattan Jews ran Palestinian boys into the corners of the walls of Jerusalem, and riddled their young bodies with American bullets? Where were your tears while Israelis blew the heads off the bodies of babies and committed hundreds of thousands of other unspeakable atrocities against the helpless and innocent, the powerless, old men and women?

I can tell you where the Jews of New York were because I've written it, many times. When New York Jews went to Israel and killed innocent babies, they returned to a hero's welcome.

Please America, cut-off the ... Jew Television. Say no to the insane, pro-Israel, butt-wipe politicians, and listen to that small voice, somewhere in your inner-being, that has told you over and over again that what we have done regarding the bastard state of Israel and Jew war criminals is, and has always been, wrong and evil.

Who did this horrible thing? I don't know and the question of who did it must be secondary to the cardinal question of "Who is responsible?" And this question I can, effortlessly, answer.

First I accuse Senator Richard Shelby because I stood in his face and told him that his support of Israel was creating an extremely dangerous situation for my family and friends. Although surrounded by police, and jeered by other politicians, I told him, ten years ago, that his and this nation's policies endangered us all.

Listen America, your poltroonish politicians are, at this moment, rattling their swords, blaspheming God, and quoting inappropriate scriptures. And all the while, looking for those "responsible." Look in a mirror, you mamzers, look at yourselves! You killed these people just as surely as if you had flown the planes!

You imbeciles, talking about "exterminating" those who are to blame and those who "support" terrorist. Supporters of terror? You brain-dead bastards, you have supported terrorists every time you voted to send Israel our money, our tanks, our helicopter gunships, rockets etc. etc.

Speaking now, is that beastly little war stud, Charlie Schumer. Charlie is talking about freedom just like a whore talks about love. What a cruel joke!

And now comes Hillary Clinton, wrapped in a Star of David flag and talking mean. Do you really ascribe any credence to this amateurish, Yiddish theater?

Oh, but standing a head taller, above all this septic, is that fat-jawed, deluded ..., the Rebe Jerry Falwell. Did you hear what this Judeo-Christian, Christian-Zionist, idiot, son-of-a-bitch said? Did You hear him, Jesus? He said, "We should do what Ronald Reagan did to Muammar Kaddafi, kill their families." Were it not for Jerry Falwell and his asinine followers there would never have been a Twin Towers suicide attack.

You don't have a congressman or woman or prominent religious leader, who can say no, to the Jew. If one refuses, in even a slight way, to support Jew terrorists, they all know that their careers would abruptly end. These cowards, from the President on down, will continue to deny their own culpability and will, forever, sacrifice our people on a stupid, bloody, Zionist altar.

Listen to them! They are talking Jewish, thinking Jewish and will soon lash-out in a very unmanly Jewish way. They are talking revenge, blood revenge. Lets go kill somebody, anybody, and their families!

"We will find these people and they will suffer," said George. "We gonna hunt-down and punish those responsible."

Well, George, why don't we start with those Jew writers who, just last week, advocated exterminating or forcibly expelling all Palestinians from their homeland. Take a hard look at what you, your vice president, and Powell, Rice, Rumsfeld, etc. said when asked about the Israelis assassinating PLO leaders. You people approved of these horrors and some even said that they would do the same things here, if necessary. Extra-judicial assassinations, here?

So, look at you. You miserable accessories, accomplices, collaborators, you brought this plague to our shores. Before the fact and after the fact, you will continue to deny guilt for this disaster, and like the Jew, and like your marionette predecessors, you will never question your own responsibility, nor the insanity of your one-sided foreign policies.

A few, only a precious few, thinking-people, know that we are already at war. At war with our consciences, and at war with the ignorance of those proles around us whose senses are controlled by the very ones who caused this calamity. As long as we call Israel our friend there will always be an Osama bin Laden.

Two Minutes of Hate

And the proles will, again, blame whomever they are told to blame and demand the destruction of Oceania East or Oceania West because:

"It was not desirable that the proles should have strong political feelings. All that was required of them was a primitive patriotism which could be appealed to whenever it was necessary." George Orwell -- "1984"

Can we not stop for just one moment and ask ourselves the simple, simplest, question: Why do people hate us so? Is there something patently wrong with us or what our leaders are doing?

Israel is not worth the blood or bone of a single American. Oh God in heaven, look what it just cost us! Is this a wake-up call with the worst yet to come? God save us from our leaders and from our ignorance."

Actually, according to his sympathetic biographer, David Garrow, King considered himself to be a Marxist.

Any other guise he assumed -- "Black leader," "Christian," Democrat, Republican, "non-violent," or whatever -- was to advance the cause of his primary loyalty.

Is Black Liberation Theology related to - "The Palestinian Liberation Theology which grew out of the Liberation Theology movement popularized in Latin America in the 1970s and 80s, a faddy form of Christian socialism where Replacement Theology met Marxism. They emphasized oppression of the poor and encouraged political activism to abolish perpetual class struggle. The rich were against God by way of their wealth, and the poor were privileged by way of their poverty. The Bible was reduced to nothing more than stories about the poor and the persecuted."

"The heyday of Liberation Theology was its inception. With the fall of the Soviet Union and the failure of Marxist revolutionary movements in Latin America, Liberation Theology lost most of its justification and influence. The premise did appeal to Palestinians, because of its favor for the underdog and its potential to de-Zionize the Old Testament."

http://archive.frontpagemag.com/readArticle.aspx?ARTID=26203

The influence of liberation theology diminished after proponents using Marxist concepts were admonished by the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (CDF) in 1984 and 1986. The instructions rejected the Marxist-based idea that class struggle is fundamental to history.

Joseph Cardinal Ratzinger (now Benedict XVI), who was prefect of the CDF at the time when the Instructions were issued, published his own personal criticism of the movement in 1985. In this document Ratzinger claims that in certain forms of Liberation Theology, the meaning of basic theological terms is changed - e.g. terms such as "hope", "love", and "salvation" are assigned a Marxist interpretation in terms of "class struggle".

Ratzinger also argued that Liberation Theology is not originally a "grass-roots" movement among the poor, but rather, a creation of Western intellectuals: "an attempt to test, in a concrete scenario, ideologies that have been invented in the laboratory by European theologians" and in a certain sense itself a form of "cultural imperialism". Ratzinger saw this as a reaction to the demise or near-demise of the "Marxist myth" in the West.

FBI Serves 'Terrorism' Warrants in Chicago, Minneapolis...

"They were looking for information about folks who had traveled to Latin America or the Middle East. I've traveled in Lebanon."

A lawyer said the vaguely-worded warrant mentioned Lebanon-based Hezbollah and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC), both of which have been designated terrorist groups by the U.S. government.

A suspect said he has traveled to both Lebanon and Colombia "in solidarity with people who are being oppressed."

An attorney, called the raids "a probe into the political beliefs of American citizens and any organization anywhere that opposes the American imperial design." He said the warrants cited a federal law making it a violation to provide or conspire to provide material support to designated foreign terrorist organizations.

The warrant for the raid sought notebooks, address books, photos and maps of travels to the Palestinian territories, Colombia and in the United States on behalf of the Freedom Road Socialist Organization. It also sought materials on personal finances and those of the group, "potential co-conspirators" and recruitment efforts for the group.

The warrant also sought any information about efforts to support FARC, a guerrilla organization in Colombia, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and Hezbollah, the political and paramilitary organization based in Lebanon.

I noticed that your claims are completely without any supporting evidence.

Where's the rest of the sentence?

That depends upon the specific bulb. There is a great deal of variation in startup times.

>"Totally enclosed recessed fixtures create temperatures that are too

But you didn't refer to "Totally enclosed recessed fixtures". you referred to base-up installations.

>I use CFLs in a kitchen/breakfast room because I have 13 recessed

At this point it's clear that you're just an idiot.

An avowed Marxist, Stan Goff is a writer for The Freedom Road Socialist Organization, a group whose intent is to destroy, “by any means necessary, the whole current social order based on the rights of the wealthy.” Goff was also a member and recruiter for the Communist Party USA, a national organization of anti-capitalist activists advocating a radical revolution of the U.S. working class.

Yes, Chris Coons is without a doubt a card carrying Marxist.

Man, alcohol is just as bad and maybe worse. Just another drug, just another addiction, just another stupefied user. Why you people draw an artificial distinction between alcohol and every other dangerous drug is beyond me. Dope is dope, whether you smoke it or drink it.

For the record, I don't use any of it. In my entire 50 years my total intake of beer is less than a six pack, and not a drop in 30 years. I have never smoked anything at all.

What Islam Says About Children : God Guarantees the Rights of Children

Islam is a religion revealed by God for all people, in all places, at all times. As such, Islam is accessible to everybody and is particularly mindful of the importance of respect, rights, and responsibilities. The words of the Quran and the authentic traditions of Prophet Muhammad, may God praise him, contain the rights and responsibilities granted by God to humankind. They are not subject to the whims and desires of men or women therefore they do not change. These unique rights mentioned in Islam also include the rights of children. Children’s rights are not guaranteed by the actions of their parents, their communities, or even their governments. God Himself guarantees children’s rights.

Islam establishes a legal framework, and embodies a code of ethics, designed to protect the rights of an individual including his or her right to live in a secure society. For children, security is of the upmost importance. The rights of a child begin even before birth; in fact they begin before conception. The Quran and the authentic traditions of Prophet Muhammad make it clear that two people should not enter into a marriage carelessly. A great deal of thought and preparation is necessary before man and woman commit to each other and to the family that may result from their union. Prophet Muhammad was heard to say, “A woman may be married for four reasons: her wealth, her lineage, her beauty, and her religious commitment. Marry the one who is religiously committed.”

If a man and a woman have both dedicated their lives to worshipping and pleasing their Creator then the rights of any children they may have are automatically guaranteed. Worshipping God means obeying His commandments and His commandments include securing the rights of the child. By marrying rather than having an illicit relationship the couple has already begun to secure the rights of their future children. A child has the right to know and understand his or her lineage.

Once a child is conceived, it has the right to life. The Quran makes it very clear that all life is sacred. It is never permissible to terminate a pregnancy because one fears being unable to financially support a child or another child. It is God, who is the Provider and Sustainer of all life.
“...kill not your children because of poverty - We provide sustenance for you and for them”. (Quran 6:151)

When making a decision to terminate a pregnancy it is important to remember that having a child is a blessing from God and all such blessings should be accepted with joy and gratitude. There are many people in the world today who are not able to have children, therefore when God blesses a family with one, it should be a cause for celebration and happiness. However, children are not toys or possessions. With them comes great responsibility.

The Quran and the authentic traditions of Prophet Muhammad, may God praise him, speak clearly about the responsibility that comes with raising a child. It is an obligation upon the believers to raise and care for children by bringing them up as moral, righteous human beings. Secure in the knowledge that they are valued members of the human race, and their particular families. Neglecting this duty could potentially lead a person away from the path of righteousness and away from God.

“O you who believe! Ward off yourselves and your families against a Fire (Hell) whose fuel is men and stones, over which are (appointed) angels stern (and) severe, who disobey not, (from executing) the Commands they receive from God, but do that which they are commanded” (Quran 66:6)

Prophet Muhammad said, “Each of you is a shepherd and each of you is responsible for his flock. The ruler is a shepherd and is responsible for his flock. A man is the shepherd of his family and is responsible for his flock. A woman is the shepherd of her husband’s household and is responsible for her flock”.[1]

Caring for and raising children in the proper manner is a duty on parents and it is not always easy. In fact, God reminds us in the Quran that children may even be a great trial for their parents. The triumphs and tribulations of life are a test and children are no exception. They can bring great joy and at times they can bring great sadness as well. God in His infinite wisdom never leaves a human being alone and unable to face all of life’s trials.

“Your wealth and your children are only a trial, whereas God, with Him is a great reward (Paradise).” (Quran 64:15)
Following the teachings of Islam enables a believer to face all life events including the trials the tribulations and the triumphs. The correct Islamic advice for raising and rearing children covers all aspects of life. Just like Islam itself, it is holistic advice. Physical, emotional, and spiritual wellbeing are all of equal importance. It is interesting to note that Islam has always covered the rights of children. The Islamic view of childhood states that it is a unique period in an individual’s life.[2] This is in sharp contrast to western/European ideology where the concept of childhood was not addressed until the 16th century.[3] It is not that the west did not have children or young people but rather they considered them to be small adults with the same needs and wants as adults.

Throughout Islamic history and in Islamic literature the rights and responsibilities pertaining to children are clear cut. Parents, families, and communities have certain responsibilities towards children. Many of them are obligatory, and on the Day of Judgement, God will question adults about the treatment of their children.

The late Islamic scholar, Sheikh Uthaimeen, may God have mercy on him, described children as a trust given to parents by God. He also said that children are to be well fed, well-groomed, properly dressed for seasons and appearance. Children are entitled to education, religious learning, and spiritual guidance. Their hearts must be filled with faith and their minds entertained with proper guidance, knowledge, and wisdom. With that in mind, the following series articles will guide us through child care in Islam.

Liberty Net: September 18, 2010

http://3950.net/2010/09/liberty-net-september-18-2010/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE TOTALLY BOGUS nature of the Republican establishment was a major focus of the Liberty Net this last week of Summer, and propagation coï¿½perated to make the dialogue audible across most of the continent.

Expect even better conditions as the Fall season approaches and static dies down.

Hereï¿½s a small sample of the items discussed this week on amateur radioï¿½s most exciting net:

ï¿½ The criminals in Congress are seriously discussing seizing private pension plans and forcibly merging them into the bankrupt ï¿½Social Securityï¿½ system. (20 minutes)

ï¿½ Did you know that a ï¿½dirty capitalistï¿½ American business owner made two recent broadcasts over Radio Havana in Cuba? And did you know that he was a regular Liberty Net participant? (37 minutes)

ï¿½ Glenn Beck and his ï¿½restoring honorï¿½ rally seem to be inculcating a new paradigm: When raped by the bankers or mugged by a sub-human, never go after your attacker in any way, just rant about ï¿½honorï¿½ and ï¿½patriotismï¿½ to an ever-diminishing audience of fellow chumps. (1 hour 42 minutes)

ï¿½ The criminals who changed the laws making it almost impossible for private citizens (but not corporations!) in financial trouble to hit the ï¿½reset buttonï¿½ by filing bankruptcy knew exactly what they were doing. They knew a financial collapse was coming, and acted with malice aforethought to hold our feet to the fire. (1 hour 59 minutes)

ï¿½ If you are attending a demonstration these days, itï¿½s increasingly likely that you will be harassed, or falsely arrested, or beaten by the police. Having a number of friends along with small video-capable cameras can be a godsend and protective shield. (2 hours 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Karl Roveï¿½s vicious attack on Christine Oï¿½Donnell makes a thoughtful person consider the possibility that perhaps Miss Oï¿½Donnell is a genuine person. (3 hours 25 minutes)

ï¿½ Why does Pat Buchanan refer to the Republican leadership as ï¿½Rockefeller Republicansï¿½? (3 hours 51 minutes)

ï¿½ Expect the same old political shell game this November ï¿½ the Republican half of the ruling party will gain (since the people will blame the Democrat half for the latest disasters and depredations), and then, as the country declines further, the Democrats will gain next time. And riches and power will flow to both halves of the ruling party as the boobs are fooled and fleeced yet again. (4 hours 1 minute)

ï¿½ As the underclass, predatory government, and predatory finance grow and grow, more and more productive and intelligent people are moving out of the United States, making the percentage of parasites here larger with every passing day. (4 hours 2 minutes)

ï¿½ When Glenn Beck and Sarah Palin get the power they want, and thereby show their true colors and disappoint their bamboozled followers, will Americans finally and completely stop supporting the evil regime in Washington? (4 hours 5 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net now on your computer right here at http://3950.net/ ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And N2SAG operates a live feed and chat during Net times that lets you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere. Our thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in keeping an important part of the amateur radio service alive since 1974!

Well, DUH!

Religion is what writes the operating manual for human beings. Once, government (in villages, tribes, etc.), family, self, community and religion were all a bundle deal. Along comes man, and wants certain men to have control over the masses (tribes, villages, towns, cities) so they demanded a separation of govt and religion. However, in America, patriots do not recognize mans authority over Gods.

The New Testament is nothing but a correct operating manual for self, family and community ... the koran is nothing but chit ...

BpnJ,

To use your own words "I guarantee you, no politician . . . has the guts to say this."

US Unemployment will remain at 10%~15% from here on out; with 25%~ 33% for minorities;
no high-school; ex-con; drug user etc-etc-etc

The Choice Remains Putting People To Work; or a permanent under-class on the public dole.

Government has no more power than the people give it, in that you are quite correct. Weak men will always attempt to make a god out of government ... it is in their nature.

Bullshit. Anyone that is for government takeovers of business, healthcare and every other aspect of life does not believe in liberty.

Irrelevant. Again you have no way to defend against the points made so you go on the attack. Everything Reagan said in the clip can be applied to Obama and you can't dispute a word of it.
I can see how the words of a dead man ripping your messiah a new while your current hero in the WH is responsible for giving more to the banks than all other presidents combined and you claim to have a brain?

I am a Left Libertarian.

My point being that Ronald Reagan (who never went to church BTW) broke the social contract and gave the USA over to the bankers and the defense contractors. The man who killed poor people for fun and profit and gave missiles to Islamist Iran to keep his drug business in South America thriving; the man who sent Negroponte to kill nuns; the man whose shining city on a hill his really a for-profit penitentiary full of non-violent drug offenders; deserves extra special respect.

BpnJ -so- Now You Are Now A 'Science' Denier !

Yeah - First Here Are My Opinions :
Hot Toxic* Tobacco Smoke = Hot Toxic* Marijuana Smoke
* Both Smokes Contain many 'other' Organic Poisons Second Hand Smoking = Contact High
Better to take a Nicotine Pill = Better to take a THC Pill
 Hey What About THC Patches : Pure THC; that are Time Release; No Smoking Required; ?Free? to anyone with a Medical Marijuana [MM]# Card.
Medical Marijuana "MM" does have it's uses for all those who need it as a Valid Medical Therapy -and- It's Abuses for all those who exploit it just to get High/Loaded/Buzzed.
1 - The vast majority of the former generally are treated better by a Medical THC Pill or Medical THC Patch
-versus- Smoking Toxic Marijuana
2 - The vast majority of the latter can generally can 'medicate' themselves {get High/Loaded/Buzzed}
by simply Smoking Marijuana with it's toxins

OBTW - One of the outgrowths of Legalizing Medical Marijuana [MM] that I hope would come about is low cost {cheap $1 a Day} Prescription (Rx) Medical THC Pills and/or Medical THC Patches that would be Paid-For-By Health Insurance {State Law}.

? Medical Marijuana as a Treatment for Alzheimer Patients ? -Yes- Well at least for the ones that display Sever Anger Issues as part of the Disease.
-reallity- Patient Management -not- Treatment

-and- some/a little 'Science' That Formed Them :

{CAL EPA} is adding Marijuana Smoke to the Proposition 65
List # 1 -effective- 19 June 2009.

I have CNS trauma from spine surgery and osteoarthritis. Sometimes I need to use a walker. I use cannabis and a small amount of Vicodin-like substance so I don't scream so much. The pot makes the Vike go a lot farther. Also helps with the jazz-fusion guitar.

Well, fact: lungs were designed to process air, NOT smoke, either from tobacco or pot.

As it has been CLEARLY proven that tobacco smoke can and does cause emphysema and lung cancer, it doesn't seem like a very big stretch that pot smoke would have a similar effect.

IMHO, to believe otherwise is self-delusional -- and hazardous to your health.

For example, I know the TARP was a George W. Bush bank bailout that happened before Obama was elected.

The government is taking over health insurance, not health care. That stays the same.

First of all, I was questioning your opinion about:

"Similar things can be said for smoking pot.
>
> - - Nah the only thing Long Term Pot Smoking
> - - results in is Emphysema and Lung Cancer."

Not the science - but your opinion that smoking pot does not bring the pleasure that a beer or wine brings. In this regard the science is beside the point - Tobacco and alcohol are both legal, both harmful in various amounts, and are arguably as bad as or worse than marijuana in terms of addictiveness and harmfulness. So whats's the diff? Your argument was about the happiness it brings, and that is what I said was your opinion. Others will differ, and will choose MJ as their poison of choice.

So stop calling me a science denier (I am nothing of the kind), stop with the labels and other crapola. Your opinion about what makes a person happy is just that - an opinion, and your "nah" makes believe that no others count, when they are just as valid.

Please see my response to Roy. I would never smoke MJ or tobacco for any number of reasons, not the least of which is my lungs deserve better.

FWIW, all things being equal, MJ may be more or less bad than tobacco - but damn few people smoke the equivalent of two-packs-a-day of MJ...and some people don't smoke it at all, but use it as a food additive.

In any case, it's a matter of personal preference - addicted to cannabis or alcohol? Emphysema or Cirrhosis? The choice is - and should be - yours, not the government's.

That no good so and so who lives next door to me, (there are no good so and so's who live next door to the other side of my house too, and across the street from me) early this morning, I saw where I reckon a stray dog had ripped into their garbage bag, food garbage mixed with other crap too, and scattered that crap all over.

That gives me a real Good Idea.I have some 1 1/2'' by 1'' 1/2 by about fourteen or sixteen feet long hardwood strips of wood.I am going to put a two inches long drywall screw in the end of one of those strips of wood.Once in a while along about threeish - fourish PM when doggy wakes me up to go out in the front yard, first I will get that lonnnnng piece of wood and I will slip out my back door and if there is a garbage bag over there,,,, you get me drift? The other end of that screw with the head on it,,, their garbage can.

Threeish - fourish AM, I had meant to say.
Seeeee, there is wooden fence (cedar horizontal boards with half spacing between the boards) which runs along near my side yard and on along the back yard.I helped that divorced Bell South woman and her skinny twin sister build that fence when they used to live over there about three something years ago.

I can hide by the corner of that fence and with my lonnnnnnng stick with the drywall screw in the end of that stick, I can rip those no good so and so's garbage bag wide OPEN.That isn't being mischiveious, I call it only having me a little FUN.

5250. New book predicts failure of DAB Digital Radio

New book predicts failure of DAB Digital Radio

“Digital radio switchover is unlikely to ever happen in the UK” writes radio specialist Grant Goddard in his new book ‘DAB Digital Radio: Licensed To Fail’ published on 1 October 2010 by Radio Books in the UK and US.

Mr Goddard uncovers a secret deal struck between the government and the UK commercial radio industry to force DAB radio upon the British public. In return for the radio industry promising to press ahead with DAB, the government bowed to pressure from the largest commercial group to amend the law so that its most profitable national FM radio licence could be renewed without a public auction.

Mr Goddard also exposes a wealth of inaccurate and distorted data published by radio industry lobbyists as part of their campaign to convince the government and consumers that take-up of DAB radio has been a success in the UK and overseas.

However, while the radio industry was assuring the government of its commitment to DAB as ‘the future of radio’, Grant Goddard’s book reveals that the largest commercial radio group was quietly closing its digital radio stations and selling off its investments in DAB radio licences.

Goddard estimates that the UK radio industry’s investment to date in the DAB radio system is almost £1 billion and has contributed significantly to the current lack of profitability in the commercial radio sector. He concludes that UK radio’s misplaced faith in European DAB technology has destroyed the viability of much of the UK’s previously profitable local commercial radio industry.

Written as diary entries between 2008 and 2010, Mr Goddard’s 314-page book uses charts and graphs to chronicle a critical period in DAB radio’s implementation in the UK. The government had launched a number of initiatives intended to solve the problem of slow consumer take-up of DAB radio – the Digital Radio Working Group, the Digital Britain consultation, Digital Radio Upgrade and the Digital Economy Bill. The book documents these efforts and their culmination in the last-minute legislation of the Digital Economy Act during the final days of the outgoing Labour government in 2010.

Author Grant Goddard is a London-based media analyst specialising in the radio broadcasting sector. For thirty years, he has worked in the radio industry as a senior manager and consultant, in the UK and overseas, and has written extensively about the radio business for consumer and trade magazines.

The Earth’s Atmosphere

“By the sky which returns.” (Quran 86:11)
“[He] who made for you the earth a bed [spread out] and the sky a ceiling…” (Quran 2:22)
In the first verse God swears by the sky[1] and its function of ‘returning’ without specifying what it ‘returns.’ In Islamic doctrine, a divine oath signifies the magnitude of importance of a special relation to the Creator, and manifests His majesty and the supreme Truth in a special way.
The second verse describes the Divine Act that made the sky a ‘ceiling’ for the dwellers of earth.
Let us see what modern atmospheric science has to say about the role and function of the sky.
The atmosphere is a word which denotes all the air surrounding the earth, from the ground all the way up to the edge from which space starts. The atmosphere is composed of several layers, each defined because of the various phenomena which occur within the layer.

This image shows the average temperature profile through the Earth’s atmosphere. Temperatures in the thermosphere are very sensitive to solar activity and can vary from 500°C to 1500°C. Source: Windows to the Universe, (http://www.windows.ucar.edu), the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR). ©1995-1999, 2000 The Regents of the University of Michigan; ©2000-04 University Corporation for Atmospheric Research.
Rain, for one, is ‘returned’ to Earth by the clouds in the atmosphere. Explaining the hydrologic cycle, Encyclopedia Britannica writes:
“Water evaporates from both the aquatic and terrestrial environments as it is heated by the Sun’s energy. The rates of evaporation and precipitation depend on solar energy, as do the patterns of circulation of moisture in the air and currents in the ocean. Evaporation exceeds precipitation over the oceans, and this water vapor is transported by the wind over land, where it returns to the land through precipitation.”[2]
Not only does the atmosphere return what was on the surface back to the surface, but it reflects back into space that which might damage the flora and fauna the earth sustains, such as excessive radiant heat. In the 1990’s, collaborations between NASA, the European Space Agency (ESA), and the Institute of Space and Astronautical Science (ISAS) of Japan resulted in the International Solar-Terrestrial Physics (ISTP) Science Initiative. Polar, Wind and Geotail are a part of this initiative, combining resources and scientific communities to obtain coordinated, simultaneous investigations of the Sun-Earth space environment over an extended period of time. They have an excellent explanation of how the atmosphere returns solar heat to space.[3]

Besides ‘returning’ rain, heat and radio waves, the atmosphere protects us like a ceiling above our heads by filtering out deadly cosmic rays, powerful ultraviolet (UV) radiation from the Sun, and even meteorites on collision course with Earth.[4]
Pennsylvania State Public Broadcasting tells us:
“The sunlight that we can see represents one group of wavelengths, visible light. Other wavelengths emitted by the sun include x-rays and ultraviolet radiation. X-rays and some ultraviolet light waves are absorbed high in Earth’s atmosphere. They heat the thin layer of gas there to very high temperatures. Ultraviolet light waves are the rays that can cause sunburn. Most ultraviolet light waves are absorbed by a thicker layer of gas closer to Earth called the ozone layer. By soaking up the deadly ultraviolet and x-rays, the atmosphere acts as a protective shield around the planet. Like a giant thermal blanket, the atmosphere also keeps temperatures from getting too hot or too cold. In addition, the atmosphere also protects us from constant bombardment by meteoroids, bits of rock and dust that travel at high speeds throughout the solar system. The falling stars we see at night are not stars at all; they are actually meteoroids burning up in our atmosphere due to the extreme heating they undergo.”[5]

This is an image of Earth’s polar stratospheric clouds. These clouds are involved in the creation of Earth’s ozone hole. Source: Windows to the Universe, (http://www.windows.ucar.edu/) at the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR). ©1995-1999, 2000 The Regents of the University of Michigan; ©2000-04 University Corporation for Atmospheric Research.
Encyclopedia Britannica, describing the role of Stratosphere, tells us about its protective role in absorbing dangerous ultraviolet radiation:

“In the upper stratospheric regions, absorption of ultraviolet light from the Sun breaks down oxygen molecules; recombination of oxygen atoms with O2 molecules into ozone (O3) creates the ozone layer, which shields the lower ecosphere from harmful short-wavelength radiation… More disturbing, however, is the discovery of a growing depletion of ozone over temperate latitudes, where a large percentage of the world’s population resides, since the ozone layer serves as a shield against ultraviolet radiation, which has been found to cause skin cancer.”[6]

The mesosphere is the layer in which many meteors burn up while entering the Earth’s atmosphere. Imagine a baseball zipping along at 30,000 miles per hour. That’s how big and fast many meteors are. When they plow through the atmosphere, meteors are heated to more than 3000 degrees Fahrenheit, and they glow. A meteor compresses air in front of it. The air heats up, in turn heating the meteor.[7]

This is an image which shows the Earth and its atmosphere. The mesosphere would be the dark blue edge located on the far top of the image underneath the back.

Earth is surrounded by a magnetic force field - a bubble in space called “the magnetosphere” tens of thousands of miles wide. The magnetosphere acts as a shield that protects us from solar storms. However, according to new observations from NASA’s IMAGE spacecraft and the joint NASA/European Space Agency Cluster satellites, immense cracks sometimes develop in Earth’s magnetosphere and remain open for hours. This allows the solar wind to gush through and power stormy space weather. Fortunately, these cracks do not expose Earth’s surface to the solar wind. Our atmosphere protects us, even when our magnetic field does not.[8]

An artist’s rendition of NASA’s IMAGE satellite flying through a ‘crack’ in Earth’s magnetic field.
How would it be possible for a fourteenth century desert dweller to describe the sky in a manner so precise that only recent scientific discoveries have confirmed it? The only way is if he received revelation from the Creator of the sky.

Footnotes: [1]Al-Samaa’, the Arabic word translated here as ‘sky’ includes earth’s atmosphere as indicated by the verse 2:164.

It uses WiFi to connect to the router. The sixties are over Steve.
There's no sport in hearing a 100KW station a few hundred miles away.
HFBC is obsolete. Who do you think still listens to that?

When the BBC became available on XM I stopped listening to HFBC completely, but I still enjoyed the Coast Guard. Now they are pretty much on Iridium and other sky based venues so I am left with digital modes on the amateur bands. I just covered the eastern part of North America with a readable 30 Watt signal. Probably caught a few ships at sea, too, but they don't report to the auto-spotter database.

But it's OK, I was listening to my $75 web radio and my BCT-8 while I was doing it.

Hey Dave,
Can you give me a little tutorial about web radio? Say I wanted to listen

at night while in bed, the computer is in the other room, do I need to do anything to the computer before I go to bed? Do I setup the radio for specific URLs , then I can just change channels on the radio. I have looked for an online tutorial but haven't found one.
Thanks MikeK

How high is my house? I don't know, it is a one storey Cape Cod style house, it was built in 1947.It is high enough I don't want to fall off the roof, that is for sure.About 12 feet on the outside of both sides of my living room I need to finish up with outside and that will be just about it, as far as the outside is concerned.Slow as I am, I reckon it will take me about three or four days on each side, unless it rains.I want to get it all done before Wintertime.Then I need to put a new fuel pump on my 1983 Dodge van and get new mufflers and tail pipe and replace a leaky vacuum line on that van.I am slowwwwww.

Bob, I appreciate the kind words. There's more to me than what appears on this NG, of course, not all of it smart or nice ;-). As to your question, that's a hard one. I have no easy answer.

I have the CCrane Wireless Internet Radio by the bed for listening to talk shows from the NE states. I still use my old boatanchors for "messing" around twirling tuning knobs.

Sure thing. This is how I got started:

http://www.shoutcast.com/

http://dir.xiph.org/index.php

There's also a web stream tuner in iTunes that contains CBS stations like KROQ and KCBS

Plus, there are more and more dedicated tuners like the Myine IRA.

http://myine.com/ira/

It searches a central database for tens of thousands of stations and podcasts. It gets the World Service, but it also gets all the little tiny BBC regional outlets where they speak Welsh and stuff.
Amazon sells them for $75 occasionally, $150 is too much, IMHO.

I prefer listening to stuff straight off the radio. It's just more fun to twiddle the knobs. Noise, fading, and QRM enhance the experience of pulling a station out of the ether.

"man-made noise" is part of the total Radio Listening Experience : Not about the 'joy of'; simple the real 'over-the-air' experience.

The average rec.radio.shortwave Liberal Fascist doesn’t even realize he is helpless.

He wakes-up, and turns on NBC. Time to soak up a few half truths, and a few more flat-out lies.

In his car, he’s listening to National Public Radio. Brainwashing and classical music. Perfect for someone who doesn’t care about what is ACTUALLY going on in the world.

Top it off with plenty of nonsense from liberals telling him how “change” is making his life “better”. And the economy is “fixed”. Right.

All the while, the only government organization that has ever done anything remotely useful – the National Aeronautics & Space Administration (NASA) – is sounding the alarm – but no one is listening!

'Special Dave',

All great until Prez Obama shuts down the Internet and all you will be able to Listen to is VO-NPR*.

You will have to sneak out to the Garage, up to won't find the Shortwave Radio and smash it to pieces in your driveway; while you being held down on your knees and your neighbors watch

This is a frigging fear-mongering ad by a greedy bastard to who wants to take the gullible for a ride. Here's what the shyster says:

"I have spent days and months pouring over scientific analyses, forums, financial statements, news articles and interviewing the leading experts so you don't have to."

In other words, "I've made up all the scary parts for you!"

When this ad provides at least a single resource to verify the "information" it provides, then we will see about . Until then, later duds.

Because the standalone appliance uses 60% less electricity than my very low-power Everex computer with a VIA C7 processor. Over an extended period I will use less electricity and save money.

Same reason I don't have 2 [ea] R-390A receivers. Or use resistance lighting.

I've said it before, I'll say it again:

If you like the "magic of radio", if you just want to get it in the log,
"real radio" is the way to go.

If you actually want to hear the content of the program, internet radio is the way to go.

Neither way is inherently right, it just depends on what your goals are.

I think it's perfectly reasonable that every person can find a different way to enjoy the radio hobby. I know we all disagree on practically everything else - can't we at least admit this simple concept?

'Special Dave',

You are still paying for an Internet 'Connection' and even at a low $20 per Month @ 10 Cents per KW that's equal to the Cost of having three 100 Watt Light Bulbs "On" 24/30 all month long.

24H x 30D = 740 TMHs ~ $74 @ 1 KW Average

100 Watt Light Bulb 740 TMHs ~ $7.40 @ 0.1 KW Average

Plus the Cost of the Electricity to have an Internet Appliance "On" to utilize the Internet 'Connection'.

Paying $$$ for an Internet 'Connection' is just not the same as "Free" Over-the-Air Radio ~ RHF

- That's 12 VA X 24 = that's abt. 288 Watt Hours per gay,
- or about 6 kWh per month, at $0.20 per, or about $1.20.

- Your "math" is undeciferable.

'Special Dave' - sure-do-look-like-you-math-is-fussy-288 Watt Hours x 30 Days = 8,640 Watt Hours per Month -not- about 6 kWH : Off-by-About ~44%

The Fact Still Remains that your Internet 'Connection' Costs you at least $20 per Month and that is about the Cost of running 3 x 100 Incandecent Light Bulbs 24/30.

D'Oh ! and least we forget : "Free" Over-the-Air Radio does NOT Require an Internet 'Connection' and the Associated Monthly Cost of an Internet 'Connection'.

Buy a good old AM & FM Table Radio http://www.murauchi.com/MCJ/front/images/commodity/892/4901780019892.jpg and you can receive "Free" Over-the-Air Radio at just the cost of the Electricity to run it; with NO Internet 'Connection' and the Monthly Cost of an Internet 'Connection'. [1 Cost Unit]

Buy a new Internet Radio {Audio Content Provider} and you can receive Internet Radio at the cost of the Electricity to run it; PLUS you need an Internet 'Connection' and the Monthly Cost of an Internet 'Connection'. [2 Cost Units]

OBTW - Stick a 'Pocket' AM&FM Radio in your Shirt Pocket and take an Hours Walk around town and you will hear your local AM& FM Radio Station throughout your Walk-A-Bout. You simply can NOT do that with your Internet Radio. -eod- ~ RHF

My internet costs about a dollar a day. If I use my Drake to listen to talk radio I have to leave a 1 Amp linear power supply plugged-in all the time. That's 12 VA X 24 = that's abt. 288 Watt Hours per gay, or about 6 kWh per month, at $0.20 per, or about $1.20. The internet radio appliance is also rated at 1,000 mA, but the power supply is switch mode and probably never even comes close to using that much power.

My internet connection is always on, whether I use it to listen to KLBJ or not, so that doesn't count.

That's what I was using before I got the appliances (I have 2 of them).
The Asus EeePC900A power supply is also a switcher rated at 1 Amp. But I have to wait for Windows to open and I have to use it for traveling sometimes, etc. Plus it doesn't have a remote control.

Dave,

Yes the Tivoli Radio produces a very good high quality sound from just one Speaker : But it just lackes that mellow full room filling sound of the old Tube Radios got from their one Speaker . . .

FWIW - I do own one of the Tivoli Model One Radios.
It has a Very Good Tuner and equally Good Sound

The Tivoli lacks the sensitivity of the GE Super Radios. My old DX-392 even beats it ... hands down. Bought one because I liked the looks ... took it back the next day.

DAB {Eureka 147} only succeeds in the short term; when one of the other options AM & FM is removed causing a Force Migration of Radio Listeners from one to the other.

Like it or not this is the Problem that IBOC was supposed to overcome by keeping Digital Radio in the same AM & FM Radio Bands and allowing for existing Radio Listeners to slowly and naturally Migrate from Analog to Digital without shutting down one of the existing Radio Bands and Forcing the Migration of Radio Listeners from one old Band to another new Band. The driving force in modifying Radio Listener Behavior was the Car/Truck with 90% of them being replace within a Decade; and each of those with a new IBOC AM & FM HD-Radio in the Dash. This would then be leveraged into the Home and Office.
* A secondary aspect would be the Ramping-Up of Digital Power and the Ramping-Down ot the Analog Power over a number of years.
* A third aspect would be the HD-2 Radio Channels giving FM HD-Radio the potential for twice as much Audio Content in the existing FM Radio Band.

Conclusion : Why DAB Eureka 147 failed in the UK :
Maybe the reason IBOC "HD" AM & FM Radio will succeed in the USA.

For at least the last one, I have a perfect solution.

Start citing, fining and jailing the unpatriotic bastards who hire illegals.

In fact, this one solution may substantially resolve all the rest.

Two things led to the IBOC solution in the U.S.:

1) There was no spectrum available for a digital-only service.

2) Broadcasters wanted an IBOC solution because it did not require the purchase of additional spectrum or licenses.

Now there's talk of a new digital-only band in the space where analog TV channels 5 and 6 used to be. This would be especially well suited to low power FM stations. It would likely use iBiquity technology as well because the silicon used for HD Radio could be easily modified for the new band. With the low power stations moved off of FM there would be less of an issue with increased power on HD FM causing interference to those stations. The big issue with HD right now is that the power levels are too low to provide equivalent coverage to FM.

The addition/adoption of HD has striking parallels to the addition/adoption of FM radio in the 20th century. It took FM 40 years to become as ubiquitous as AM. Those that complain that HD is taking too long to become ubiquitous have no understanding of the radio business and how hard it is to replace the installed base of receivers.

In any case, it all is coming together for HD in the U.S. with huge increases in receiver sales, more vehicle manufacturers including HD, and the HD consortium deciding to assist smaller stations with the conversion to HD by helping with funding and engineering expertise that the smaller stations lack.

As practiced by the AFA, yes. They are almost a parody of what they claim to be. How do gays threaten marriage? I've never heard a rational explanation as to how them being married affects non gays in any real way.

Their ideas on decency and morality are from a fundie prospective, out of touch with reality and the opinions of many, if not most people.

I'm against most abortions myself, but they accomplish nothing positive due to the way they operate.

Proclaiming? No, just my opinion, just like yours. Your's seems to be that the are doing something positive.

Most of the members are misguided and easily swayed by the leadership of the organization who seem to be about as evil and hypocritical as they come, without being outright criminals..

That's part of the Arizona law. And one of the elements specifically cited in the Federal suit against Arizona.

The truth is that there simply isn't the political will to address this issue. If there were, it would have been solved, by now.

There are 536 individuals in this country with the power to make this issue go away. Only 536. And it takes but 269 of them to get it done. 357, if the President isn't on board. Only 357.

And yet....

Only 357 people in all of the US could end the illegal immigration issue tomorrow. Ironically, right around 536 sit in offices where they were elected on the promise to do SOMETHING about illegal immigration.

This has been a hot button issue in the US for a couple of decades, now. Despite the fact that far more than those 357 have run on the promise to resolve the issue. Which underscores that illegal immigration is far more politically useful as an issue than a solution.

You're right. Your suggestion is a perfect solution.

But it's clear that a solution is NOT the goal, here.

If it were, it would have been done.

Preposterous.

The money-men wanted to preserve the inferiority of the smaller stations and AM stations, which could have suddenly become equal in coverage and quality in a new digital band. They wanted to prevent that from happening. They also wanted to _own_ any new content streams that might come into existence, instead of having them available for new broadcasters.

The Tivoli Model One is a state of the art FM radio, and 'Dwardo will be happy to tell you AM is dead.

The point of the thread being wood cabinets. If you put the Tivoli on its side with the bass port facing open space it fills the room.

Two areas where your analogy breaks down.

One is that FM worked. Hybrid Digital...not so much. FM presented a listenable improvement in audio performance that even the tone deaf could recognize. Many users of Hybrid Digital do not agree that the audio performance measures up to the claims made for it.

The other is that the market has changed from the days of early FM, when the listening opportunities were limited. AM, or recordings that were noisy, of questionable reproductive quality, and irregular availability. Further, receivers were bulky, heavy and not portably operated with any convenience. Batteries were expensive.

Today, the reproduction of recordings is remarkably consistent, and of very high comparative quality. They are also globally available for a fraction of the cost of recordings in the days of early FM. And a person can put his/her entire recording library in a shirt pocket, on a device with a battery life of many hours, rechargable at one's own convenience. Often from a variety of sources. There are also myriad options for listening of programmed content. AM, of course, and FM, as well as internet radio, streamed audio on cell phones, satellite radio, and self programmed 'radio channels' accessible, often at a whim.

None of these offers the dropouts, and the Hybrid Digital to Analog to Hybrid Digital switching offered by IBOC.

So, while the lamp isn't out for HD radio, at least not yet, the comparison with the early days of FM does not really possess the parallels as claimed.

Going back to the beginning days of this discussion: for IBOC to take off, there will have to be a mandate by FCC that analog broadcasting is to end.

No, not true. Many people that have never listened to HD claim poor audio performance, but they have no experience with HD. Many have a vested interest in the failure of digital radio. Every independent review of HD FM has noted the superior audio quality and the lack of interference.

Not really necessary. Sufficient numbers of stations in the urban markets have voluntarily added HD. What would be helpful is the elimination of royalties on the receiver side combined with a mandate that all receivers after a certain date be able to receive HD. Financial incentives for stations to increase their HD power levels to the maximum allowable levels would also help. But he HD consortium deciding to assist smaller stations with the conversion to HD by helping with funding and engineering expertise that the smaller stations lack, is going to help as well.

While it's true, there are those who have a vested interest in teh failure of IBOC, I"m not referrring to those. I refer specifically to those who have heard Hybrid Digital, and have attempted to use Hybrid Digital Radio, and have found that it's audio performance fails to meet what's been claimed for it.

I'm one of them. And I've participated in conducting listening tests. I've also read page after page of complaints of users not impressed by HD's performance.

I've been in stores when Hybrid Digital receivers have been returned for non performance.

So...Yes, true. Many users of Hybrid Digital do not agree that the performance measures up to what's been claimed for it.

What broadcasters choose to do is one thing. What listeners choose to purchase is another.

Listeners have not embraced HD. Streams are being discontinued in markets across the country.

But you have conveniently not addressed the issue of marketplace.
There are dramatically more sources for listening to content than there were in the early days of FM. The audio quality of recordings can now exceed the audio performance of broadcast en masse. And users can now put their entire library of recordings in their pockets.

All of which paints a much different picture than that faced by FM in it's own infancy.

Hybrid Digital Radio may, indeed, become a success.

But, dramatically more likely, is that, like DAT, it's a solution for which the problem has been more effectively, and more efficiently addressed by newer, and more readily accessible technologies.

In any event, for users to make that conversion, en masse, and make Hybrid Digital Radio a going concern, there will have to be a mandate that the current scheme of broadcasting will end. Which may happen. There is powerful money behind Hybrid Digital. And considerable political will.

But it will take a political solution to make the investment pay returns before The Money goes in a different direction.

Yes by simply Expanding the FM Radio Band and requiring all the new FM Radio Stations to be IBOC HD-Radio with a Cut-Off of Analog at 5 Years would hasten the migration of Radio Listeners to HD-Radio on the FM Band.

Use the New FM Channels to migrate many of the Smaller and Lower Powered AM Radio Stations to the Expanded FM Radio Band. {Depopulate the AM

Radio Band}.

I will repeat myself -presently- The driving force in modifying Radio Listener Behavior is their Car/Truck
When the number of Cars/Trucks on-the-road with IBOC HD-Radio is around 90% IBOC will be de-facto Adopted by the Radio Listeners in their Car/Trucks.
That will take a Decade or more. Each of those new IBOC AM & FM HD-Radio Listeners will eventually buy a new HD-Radio for their Home and/or Office.
Yes is a Decade Long View to gently transition to HD-Radio; by gradually expanding it's 'presence'.

It will be similar to the transition to digital television, though longer. First there will be a requirement that all new receivers be capable of receiving digital, then after x number of years there will be a requirement to turn off analog (no doubt with some extensions). 2020 is probably too early. With television, since so few are mobile receivers, it was easy to do adapter boxes for digital but with radio this is unlikely since the adapter would be too costly and too cumbersome.

The FCC should at least implement a date that all new receivers be capable of receiving HD FM, and something should be worked out to eliminate royalties on the receiver side to start, and the transmitter side long term. The government could in essence buy out iBiquity and turn the technology into open source.

All the misinformation you see promulgated by those opposed to HD Radio is based _solely_ on their objection to the royalty model of iBiquity, not on any valid technological objections. Such a position is understandable since it does seem unfair that a private company profits from a monopoly of their system (though the real profits are actually made by the equipment manufacturers).

Numerous papers written by broadcast engineers say otherwise.

Several of them were published in Radio World over the last few years. All of them objected on technical grounds.

One engineer--someone who posted here, in fact--also mentioned that iBiquity threatened legal action for criticism of the Hybrid Digital Radio system

A system of quality, that meets the needs of the customers, requires no such thuggery to protect it.

That alone raises questions about it's operation.

Make that 35& Number "358-1" or '356+1'

Point-of-Fact :
Actually there are two 'Separate' Numbers :

2/3rds of 100 Senators ~67

BpnJ,

I would agree Put those Employers of Illegal Aliens
Out-of-Business : Confiscate the Business, Property

Officers and the Board.

Send a Hard-Line Message and They Will Stop Employing Illegal Aliens and Start Hiring Americans.

I've never heard of anything that requires a church to perform a gay wedding, or a straight one, for that matter. This sounds like it's some claim posted on a whackjob page right under the latest hysterical rant about the UN taking over the world and taking all our guns away. I have a bunch of them, and I have no fear of the UN doing a damn thing, or the Feds. The UN is a very impotent organization at this point in time, and I see no reason to believe they will become any stronger, like in my lifetime.

Nobody is making people marry people of the same sex. Nobody is making people live with people instead of/before marrying them. As I said before, I'm against most abortions, but their methods of combating them are polarizing to an extreme degree.

They have the freedom to not do anything they don't approve of. Trouble is, they want to force their version of morality on everyone else.

As they practice them, yes, in many ways. People who claim to practice "Christian Moral Principles (Why cap all three words?)" more often than not prove to be less moral than the people they rave against. Look on any news site for example after example. They are not really better than anyone else.

A lot of them seem to very ignorant, to put it mildly. You have a different opinion, no doubt. It's no big deal to me what you believe, just don't try to force feed it to me, I'll puke it back at you.

Why wouldn't I change it? You had it set to not even reply to the group you posted it in originally. Is it really necessary to play little games like this? You are over 12 years old, right? Sometimes I really have doubts.

Fine, nobody is stopping you from believing anything you want to believe. You simply have a much different opinion than I do about the AFA and other ultra conservative organizations, and their agendas, and leadership than I do.

Isn't that our right to disagree?

A B HO Butt Kisser woman (in Mississippi) tried to circumcise her one year old boy at home.She (or somebody) wound up calling an ambulance.The ambulance people called the Sherriff department.

I bought that couch this morning at the Goodwill store, $50.00.And I also bought an old hardback book which was printed in 1916, The Irish Orators.A History Of Ireland's Fight For Freedom.
I am really going to enjoy reading the book.

- It will be similar to the transition to digital television, though
- longer. First there will be a requirement that all new receivers be
- capable of receiving digital, then after x number of years there will be
- a requirement to turn off analog (no doubt with some extensions).
2020
- is probably too early. With television, since so few are mobile
- receivers, it was easy to do adapter boxes for digital but with radio
- this is unlikely since the adapter would be too costly and too cumbersome.

No simply by Ramping-Up the Digital Power every two to three Years over a Two Decades
-and- At the same time Ramping-Down the Analog Power over the same number of years.

This Works for FM HD-Radio Only :
Digital Power Up -and- Analog Power Down
Year 2005 : Digital 1% -&- Analog 99%
Year 2010 : Digital 10% -&- Analog 90%
Year 2013 : Digital 12% -&- Analog 75%
Year 2016 : Digital 14% -&- Analog 60%
Year 2019 : Digital 16% -&- Analog 45%
Year 2022 : Digital 18% -&- Analog 30%
Year 2025 : Digital 20% -&- Analog 15%
Year 2025 : Digital 20% -&- Analog 00%

AM/MW IBOC is a Different Animal : For the AM/MW Radio Band with a Digital IBOC Signal a 1 KW "Local" Analog Radio Station and a 50 KW Clear Channel Radio Station Do Not Work along side each other in an All Digital Radio Band [1KW versus 50KW]

Digital AM Radio Power Ranges really will only work in a more 'Localized' Compressed Set of Power Ranges :

* 500 Watts Local ~ 25 Miles {Both Days and Nights}
* 1500 Watts Metro ~ 50 Miles
{Maybe reduced to 1000 Watts Nights}
4500 Watts Regional ~ 100 Miles
{Maybe reduced to 3000 Watts Nights}

?WHY? a 'Localized' Compressed Set of Power Ranges ?
The reason 'why' is the IBOC Digital Side-Bands will effectively make all AM/MW Radio Broadcasting "Local"
-and- having a Higher Powered AM/MW Radio Station will simply be having a Digital Hash Jammer on one to two channels on each side of it for hundreds of Miles outside of it's Licensed Broadcast Service Area.

Presently the old 50 KW 'The Clears" have a 'revised' 750 Mile 'protected' Range in the Analog Mode :
This is NOT Compatible with the IBOC Digital Mode
-so- There needs to be a 2nd Revision for the now former "Clears" to a Regional 100 Mile 'protected' Range in IBOC Digital Mode with a Power limit of under 5 KW {4500 Watts}. to insure that their Digital Side-Bands Hash does not extend to far into 'other' Media Markets and effective JAM other Broadcasters.
Once Again with IBOC Digital Transmission : All AM/MW Radio Broadcasters in the USA become "Local" to their :
Local Area ~ 25 Miles
Local Metro ~ 50 Miles
Local Region ~ 100 Miles
-and- NOT {Nothing} Beyond That [.]

- turn the technology into open source.

Now that is a smart idea
-and- Yes imho it should be done.
- All the misinformation you see promulgated by those opposed to HD

- is based _solely_ on their objection to the royalty model of

What a fantastically broad and unverifiable statement.

I have listened to IBOC. And I have read numerous articles criticizing IBOC on numerous grounds, and none of them mentioned the royalties.

I do suspect, though, that they -- and the sweetheart monopoly behind them -- are just as dishonest as the rest of the system.

Let's just say that it's greatly exaggerated for reasons that we are all aware of.

I'm sure you understand that that is not the reason behind digital radio, though if the power levels continue to rise as digital replaces analog then indeed those LPFM stations would be history. The FCC is looking at a new digital band where those stations could move, or they could lease sub-channels of more powerful HD stations. At least they'd be able to be received by a lot more listeners!

One of my favorite brushes with greatness was the afternoon I met Henry Kloss in a meeting room at the 1995 NSCA convention in Indianapolis. He was very excited about his latest project, a simple radio, like the Model 8 he had built 40 years earlier.

A friend of mine had a KLH 8. That's one of the reasons I bought a Tivoli (stereo version). Delightful sound and amazing FM reception for such a little machine.

Best kitchen radio I've ever owned, though it was stolen along with all my other radio gear, so I don't have it now. I did get a Boston Acoustics clock radio at a yard sale last year, and it sounds almost as good.

With every good wish,

Yes, the AM on the Tivoli left a lot to be desired. My Carver TX-11a and McKay Dymek AM5 beat it handily in every way. My favorite AM receivers, though, were ones I modified for high fidelity: my Racal RA-6217 and Kenwood TS-440S.

Sound preference is admittedly subjective, but the Hammarlund HQ-180AC I once owned sounded SUPERB on AM. There's just SOMETHING about tubes that solid-state components can't seem to match. However, right now I feed my Ten-Tec RX340 thru a Sherwood SE-3 synch dectector driving an el-cheapo Radio Shit bass-reflex speaker and the AM audio sounds very good indeed, especially if I open up the 340's IF filter to 16 khz.

Read all the way through...

While the ruling class media have been busy casting slurs, slanders and snide comments about Christine O'Donnell, Jeffrey Lord over at American Spectator has been busy unearthing some rather interesting background on Harry Reid's pet senatorial candidate, Chris Coons.

http://spectator.org/archives/2010/09/20/chris-coons-volunteer-for-libe

In a brilliant piece of writing and detective work, Mr. Lord has traced a rather involved series of links from Mr. Coons' junior year of college abroad in Africa, and his marked change in political views, to the Black Liberation Theology movement in South Africa, and ultimately to Trinity UCC Church in Chicago, home of one Jeremiah Wright and our sitting President.

The Spectator article begins by asking just what was it that Mr. Coons encountered on his African sabbatical that changed him , as Politico describes it, from a "proud founding member of the Amherst College Republicans" to the "Bearded Marxist" he wrote about on his return from abroad.

The answer appears to be that during his travels Coons did "volunteer work" for the South African Council of Churches (SACC), which includes a think tank called the Institute for Contextual Theology, which in turn promotes Liberation Theology:

So what was SACC up to in this period when Chris Coons crossed the Atlantic to South Africa and Kenya to "volunteer" and do "relief work"? What was SACC doing that Chris Coons seems not to want to discuss on his website? Or that leaves the Washington Post and the New York Times so incurious?...

...there was something else going on in South Africa with those who believed in James Cone's Black Liberation Theology that had nothing at all to do with an agenda of freedom for South African blacks...

...Yes indeed. Liberation theology. The Marxism-as-Christianity umbrella philosophy...

The article goes on at length to trace writings by South African theologians to a September 16th book signing for Preaching with Sacred Fire: An Anthology of African American Sermons, 1750-present, held at, of all places, Trinity UCC Church in Chicago.

Citing the litany of radical actions, appointments and legislation imposed by the Obama government, the Spectator column goes on to observe:

America is right this minute in the tightening grip of "liberation theology" -- exactly the philosophy that Delaware's Chris Coons was so anxious to go to Africa and serve as a volunteer.

On a sourcing note, while Mr. Lord's article links Mr. Coons' Kenya trip to the South African Council of Churches through a Wikipedia reference, the SACC reference appears right on the Chris Coons campaign web site, as well as in a salon.com article and elsewhere .

The Spectator article is a long one, but well worth reading to get the full flavor of a significant chapter in the life and ideology of candidate Coons. The article concludes

Chris Coons wants to be the newest addition to the liberation theology zealotry in Washington -- and the people of Delaware are supposed to be the passive yokels who agree to put him there. Even as they are losing their jobs, their homes and their entire hard won way of life because of the very philosophy Coons traveled thousands of miles to Africa to support.

So, while the media mob mentality does everything possible to denigrate and disparage Christine O'Donnell, they have been "silent on a stunning revelation that could prove uniquely fatal to Chris Coons' Senate candidacy," as the Washington Times quotes Mr. Lord.

Obama, Black Liberation Theology, and Karl Marx

http://www.americanthinker.com/2008/05/obama_black_liberation_theolog.html

Is Black Liberation Theology related to - "The Palestinian Liberation Theology which grew out of the Liberation Theology movement popularized in Latin America in the 1970s and 80s, a faddy form of Christian socialism where Replacement Theology met Marxism. They emphasized oppression of the poor and encouraged political activism to abolish perpetual class struggle. The rich were against God by way of their wealth, and the poor were privileged by way of their poverty. The Bible was reduced to nothing more than stories about the poor and the persecuted."

"The heyday of Liberation Theology was its inception. With the fall of the Soviet Union and the failure of Marxist revolutionary movements in Latin America, Liberation Theology lost most of its justification and influence. The premise did appeal to Palestinians, because of its favor for the underdog and its potential to de-Zionize the Old Testament."

http://archive.frontpagemag.com/readArticle.aspx?ARTID=26203

The influence of liberation theology diminished after proponents using Marxist concepts were admonished by the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (CDF) in 1984 and 1986. The instructions rejected the Marxist-based idea that class struggle is fundamental to history.

Joseph Cardinal Ratzinger (now Benedict XVI), who was prefect of the CDF at the time when the Instructions were issued, published his own personal criticism of the movement in 1985. In this document Ratzinger claims that in certain forms of Liberation Theology, the meaning of basic theological terms is changed - e.g. terms such as "hope", "love", and "salvation" are assigned a Marxist interpretation in terms of "class struggle".

Ratzinger also argued that Liberation Theology is not originally a "grass-roots" movement among the poor, but rather, a creation of Western intellectuals: "an attempt to test, in a concrete scenario, ideologies that have been invented in the laboratory by European theologians" and in a certain sense itself a form of "cultural imperialism". Ratzinger saw this as a reaction to the demise or near-demise of the "Marxist myth" in the West.

FBI Serves 'Terrorism' Warrants in Chicago, Minneapolis...

"They were looking for information about folks who had traveled to Latin America or the Middle East. I've traveled in Lebanon."

A lawyer said the vaguely-worded warrant mentioned Lebanon-based Hezbollah and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC), both of which have been designated terrorist groups by the U.S. government.

A suspect said he has traveled to both Lebanon and Colombia "in solidarity with people who are being oppressed."

An attorney, called the raids "a probe into the political beliefs of American citizens and any organization anywhere that opposes the American imperial design." He said the warrants cited a federal law making it a violation to provide or conspire to provide material support to designated foreign terrorist organizations.

The warrant for the raid sought notebooks, address books, photos and maps of travels to the Palestinian territories, Colombia and in the United States on behalf of the Freedom Road Socialist Organization. It also sought materials on personal finances and those of the group, "potential co-conspirators" and recruitment efforts for the group.

The warrant also sought any information about efforts to support FARC, a guerrilla organization in Colombia, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and Hezbollah, the political and paramilitary organization based in Lebanon.

U.S. "progressives" meet with Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad

New York, NY - Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad met here, September 21, with 100 leaders and representatives of anti-war, labor, alternative media and Iranian and Palestinian solidarity organizations. Among the participants were Sarah Martin, Freedom Road Socialist Organization, Margaret Sarfehjooy, board member of the Minneapolis-based Women Against Military Madness, former attorney general Ramsey Clark, former Congresswoman Cynthia McKinney, Sara Flounders from the International Action Center, Brian Becker of the ANSWER coalition, Ramona Africa of the Free Mumia Coalition and Amiri Baraka, poet and activist.

The meeting was called by the president of Iran with the hope that a frank and honest exchange of views will help activists further the cause of peace between the people of Iran and the U.S.

I have at least seven or eight WebTV wireless keyboards and six WebTV set top boxes, and an Omdev adapter if I want to use any of those WebTV keyboards wired.

I use a Gyration Radio Controlled wireless mini suite keyboard (Ergo I prefer small keyboards) and Gyration Radio Controlled wireless mouse with my computer.

What's any of that got to do with your original post? Still desperately trying to tie knots where none exist?

The Air Force assigned only relatively benign and easily-explained-away UFO cases to Blue Book to make the public think UFOs were no big

No, I don't know why the Kiwa went down. It was down for a year and I had several goes at it with no luck.
Then I took it to a ham who had repaired it before.
He said he could find nothing wrong with it...???
So I fetched it back and now its mysteriously working perfectly again.

The big thing about the Kiwa MW Loop is it works very well, equalling a 1000ft beverage, which is outstanding.
And its portable - I cart it around in a medium sized suitcase.
Also, its so useful as you can rotate it, thus getting signals from various directions, like N. America and then rotate it to get Europe.
You need a separate extra beverage antenna to do that which is a huge task, so the Kiwa is very versatile.

Pity no one else has tried to make one available commercially

You have to suspend it in mid air (like on a $15 OSH stool). If there are no boundaries nearby it sounds OK. They probably designed it with a computer, or in an anechoic environment. Henry Kloss would use his ears.

Three Major Pre-Columbian Migrations into North American Two from Asia and one from Europe.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Pre-Columbian_era

The first migration from Asia was from ancestors of the Ainu people now in northern Japan.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ainu_people
http://news.softpedia.com/news/9-Amazing-Things-About-the-Ainu-People-79277.shtml

NOTE - the Land-Bridge theory is countered by the Coastal Migration theory resulting from the Ice Ages & Lower Sea Levels & Exposed Coastlines for travel by shore and boat.
WRT - The Aztec were themselves earlier Illegal Foreign Alien Invaders of Mexico and supposedly http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aztec had come from "Aztlan" a mythical land of the north.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aztlan

The Aztec were either forced by natural circumstances and weather conditions to wander away from Aztlan; or forced {war} by other early native people to leave Aztlan.
{ They Left and Abandoned Aztlan long before Europeans came to the New World. }

-fwiw- who was here before the Maya and where the Maya came from is unknown and a matter of speculation.

Checked 6070 Khz several times last night.
Best was an S3 signal on 6070 kHz with scramble.
No scramble on either 5kHz side.

scramble = bit's of audio : no real words

However hearing CKZU Shortwave Radio on 6160 kHz with Vancouver ID @ 1 AM Local PDT and several CBC Radio One IDs and followed by "The World" with PRI ID.

- You have to suspend it in mid air (like on a $15 OSH stool). If there
- are no boundaries nearby it sounds OK. They probably designed it with a - computer, or in an anechoic environment. Henry Kloss would use his ears.

Did you use a piece of Egg-Crate Foam* between the Stool and the Radio ?

will work OK too.

I am running Mint9 KDE on a laptop and PCLinuxOS on desktops, and they support the iPod. Did you go through your package manager to find a program that will control the iPod? I think that Floola does, maybe some others.

Copy that. I have a Kiwa loop and it is outstanding. I can sometimes get really deep nulls from it. Yes, it's a shame that nobody sells anything like it anymore. I'd love to see a LW version of it, but it may require more than one loop to cover those wavelengths and size might be an issue ... I'm not sure.

I rebuilt my Kiwa for longwave use. It's rewound with Litz wire, the amplifier was changed to a Dallas Lankford design and I had to use different tuning diodes along with 18 volts (two batteries) for the tuning. It tunes from below 200 KHz to over 600 KHz and is the best antenna I have for longwave.
